

JUNE 2005 HIGHLIGHTS

- The housing boom continues. New Jersey municipalities reported $1.464 billion of construction. This was the highest monthly total in the more than ten years that the Department of Community Affairs has published monthly construction data.
- Residential construction accounted for $855 million, 58.4 percent. New houses amounted to $553.1 million, 37.8 percent of all authorized work. Nonresidential structures made up $608.5 million, 41.6 percent of all activity. The number of municipalities reporting this month was 548.

Top Municipalities

- The City of Hoboken and Jersey City, both in Hudson County, had the most work in June. Housing accounted for most of this activity. Hoboken had $43.2 million of construction, 84 percent of which was residential development. The City construction office issued permits for 167 dwellings in June, all but one of which was from three new developments that have a combined construction cost of $33.5 million. Just over half of the $34 million reported in Jersey City was for housing.
- The City of Newark in Essex County had the most new houses in June: 235 authorized dwellings. Englewood City in Bergen County reported 180, all of which are luxury condominiums from a new, mixed-use development that will have commercial space, as well. The estimated cost of the development thus far is $21 million.

Mid-Year Review

- Mid-year indicators suggest that 2005 is on pace as a record year for the construction industry. New Jersey's big cities continue to be at the center of this activity. Total authorized construction is up nearly 10 percent compared to this time last year.
- Residential construction is up. The number of new houses authorized by building permits is 2.8 percent higher than the first half of 2004. Last year, the housing industry built new homes at a level not seen in more than 15 years. New retail space is up by 1.3 million square feet compared to this time last year. Office construction, however, is down by 7.3 percent.
- Jersey City reported the most work in the first half of 2005: $395.8 million. New houses accounted for 78.1 percent of this total. The City had 1,680 authorized dwellings between January and June 2004, more than any other locality.
- Atlantic City in Atlantic County had $209.7 million of construction. More than half was from the north expansion of the Borgata Hotel Casino & Spa.

- Newark had $158 million of activity reported on building permits. Nearly half of this total was from the construction of new houses.
