This video production provides insights into many successful brownfield renewal projects across the New Jersey. Interviews with government officials from then Governor Christie Whitman and State Senator Henry McNamara to developers working in Camden, Trenton, Newark and Edgewater outline the state's brownfields program. The program shows how brownfield redevelopment efforts make neighborhoods safer and provide economic stability to municipalities.

Please take the time to view our video and join a growing number of parties working to bring development back to our urban areas and cities. The goal is simple: solving environmental problems and providing businesses a place to locate and bring jobs, to create new housing and entertainment opportunities, all without having to go into farmlands, open space and other areas lacking existing infrastructure.

For more information about New Jersey's brownfields program, please check other features on our Web page or to obtain a copy of the video on VHS or compact disc (data CD-ROM), please contact Fred Mumford, community relations coordinator, at 609-633-2320 or email at Fred.Mumford@dep.state.nj.us.
