

Lessons of the Holocaust told in students' own words.

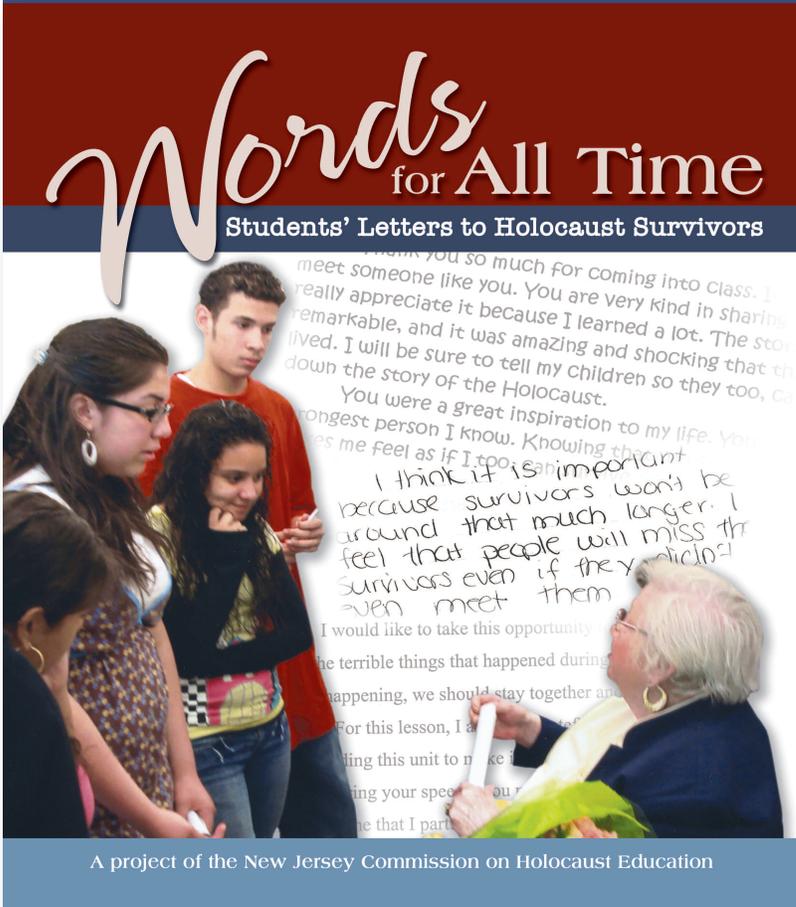

Includes a teacher activity guide.

"...Voices from the past and voices from the future combined to make certain it never happens again. An important contribution."

Thomas H. Kean, Governor of New Jersey (1982-1990) and established the nation's first statewide Holocaust Commission

"The encounter between students and Holocaust survivors in classrooms throughout the United States is one of the most morally compelling and emotionally moving educational experiences available to students today. Words for All Time documents that experience, giving voice to the imperative that survivors feel to bear witness and to the response of students to that very act of witness. Sadly, they will be among the last to experience this privilege. Happily, the New Jersey Holocaust Commission has captured this experience in a work that is charming, moving and compelling."

*Michael Berenbaum, Professor of Jewish Studies, American Jewish University, Los Angeles
Former Director of Research Institute, United States Holocaust Memorial Museum*
