

The Role of Technology in Postsecondary Education

WHEN

Wednesday, May 22, 2013
8:30am-4:00pm

WHERE

Princeton University
Dodds Auditorium
Robertson Hall
Princeton, New Jersey 08540

The increasing use of technology in postsecondary education has transformed the educational landscape. It has enhanced and increased opportunities in education as well as provided new challenges for colleges and universities. This conference will address some of these major issues by having a one day event that will bridge research and practice. Presentations will address the latest research regarding the use of technology in the classroom as well as review related issues such as who is attending college and is college worth it. Practitioner panels will discuss the nuts and bolts of providing technology in the classroom and will specifically pinpoint some of the practical issues related to online courses and flipped classrooms.

Additional panel conversations will address the issues of offering credit for these online courses and what this means for universities and other higher institutions moving forward.

This conference is one of our outreach events for the latest Future of Children Journal, Postsecondary Education in the US. This journal issue, edited by Cecilia Rouse, Thomas Brock and Lisa Barrow will be released this Spring.

This event is free, but by invitation only and requires registration.
Please register by RSVP Wednesday, May 15, 2013.

Parking:

Due to the limited available parking close to Robertson Hall, the Woodrow Wilson School has a few options for those visiting the School and needing a place to park their cars.

1. There is a parking lot (Lot 21) on the Princeton University campus reserved for visitors. The lot is located off of Faculty Road past Jadwin Gym. Please visit the parking website for more specific directions-

<http://www.princeton.edu/transportation/visitors.html>

If you choose to park there, the University offers a shuttle which can bring you to Robertson Hall. The shuttle you would need to take is the East Line. You can visit the shuttle's website for a time table schedule-
