Re: State v. Pedro Soto, et al

Dear Counsel:

These are consolidated motions to suppress under the equal protection and due process clauses of the Fourteenth Amendment.¹ ~~Nineteen~~ defendants of African ancestry claim that their arrests on the New Jersey Turnpike south of exit 3 between 1988 and 1991 result from discriminatory enforcement of the traffic laws by the New Jersey State Police.² After a lengthy hearing, I find defendants have established a prima facie case of selective enforcement which the State has failed to rebut requiring suppression of all contraband and evidence seized.

Defendants base their claim of institutional racism primarily on statistics. During discovery, each side created a database of all stops and arrests by State Police members patrolling the Turnpike between exits 1 and 7A out of the Moorestown Station for thirty-five randomly selected days between April 1988 and May 1991 from arrest reports, patrol charts, radio logs and traffic tickets. The databases are essentially the same. Both sides counted 3060 stops which the State found to include 1212 race identified stops (39.6%), the defense 1146 (37.4%).

¹The motions also include claims under the Fourth Amendment, but they were severed before the hearing to await future proceedings if not rendered moot by this decision.

²Originally, twenty-five defendants joined in the motions. On the first day of the hearing, November 28, 1994, I dismissed the motions of Darrell Stanley, Roderick Fitzgerald, Fred Robinson, Charles W. Grayer, Keith Perry and Alton Williams due to their unexplained nonappearances.

To establish a standard against which to compare the stop data, the defense conducted a traffic survey and a violator survey. Dr. John Lamberth, Chairman of the Psychology Department at Temple University who I found is qualified as an expert in statistics and social psychology, designed both surveys.

The traffic survey was conducted over twenty-one randomly selected two and one-half hour sessions between June 11 and June 24, 1993 and between 8:00 a.m. and 8:00 p.m. at four sites, two northbound and two southbound, between exits 1 and 3 of the Turnpike. Teams supervised by Fred Last, Esq., of the Office of the Public Defender observed and recorded the number of vehicles that passed them except for large trucks, tractortrailers, buses and government vehicles, how many contained a "black" occupant and the state of origin of each vehicle. Of the 42,706 vehicles counted, 13.5% had a black occupant. Dr. Lamberth testified that this percentage is consistent with the 1990 Census figures for the eleven states from where almost 90% of the observed vehicles were registered. He said it is also consistent with a study done by the Triangle Group for the U.S. Department of Transportation with which he was familiar.

The violator survey was conducted over ten sessions in four days in July 1993 by Mr. Last traveling between exits 1 and 3 in his vehicle at sixty miles per hour on cruise control after the speedometer had been calibrated and observing and recording the number of vehicles that passed him, the number of vehicles he passed and how many had a black occupant. Mr. Last counted a total of 2096 vehicles other than large trucks, tractortrailers, buses and government vehicles of which 2062 or 98.1% passed him going in excess of sixty miles per hour including 306 with a black occupant equaling about 15% of those vehicles clearly speeding. Multiple violators, that is those violating the speed limit and committing some other moving violation like tailgating, also equaled about 15% black. Dr. Lamberth testified that the difference between the percentage of black violators and the percentage of black travelers from the surveys is statistically insignificant and that there is no evidence traffic patterns changed between the period April 1988 to May 1991 in the databases and June - July 1993 when the surveys were done.

Using 13.5% as the standard or benchmark against which to compare the stop data, Dr. Lamberth found that 127 or 46.2% of the race identified stops between exits 1 and 3 were of blacks constituting an absolute disparity of 32.7%, a comparative disparity of 242% (32.7% divided by 13.5%) and 16.35 standard deviations. By convention, something is considered statistically significant if it would occur by chance fewer than five times in a hundred (over two standard deviations). In case I were to determine that the appropriate stop data for comparison with the standard is the stop data for the entire portion of the Turnpike patrolled by the Moorestown Station in recognition of the fact that the same troopers patrol between exits 3 and 7A as patrol between exits 1 and 3, Dr. Lamberth found that 408 or 35.6% of the race identified stops between exits 1 and 7A were of blacks constituting an absolute disparity of 22.1%, a comparative disparity of 164% and 22.1 standard deviations.³ He opined it is highly unlikely such statistics could have occurred randomly or by chance.⁴

³Dr. Lamberth erred in using 13.5% as the standard for comparison with the stop data. The violator survey indicates that 14.8%, rounded to 15%, of those observed speeding were black. This percentage is the percentage Dr. Lamberth should have used in making statistical comparisons with the stop data in the databases. Nonetheless, it would appear that whatever the correctly calculated disparities and standard deviations are, they would be nearly equal to those calculated by Dr. Lamberth.

⁴In this opinion I am ignoring the arrest data in the databases and Dr. Lamberth's analysis thereof since neither side produced any evidence identifying the Turnpike population between exits 1 and 3 or 1 and 7A eligible to be arrested for drug offenses or otherwise. See Wards Cove Packing Co. v. Atonio, 490 U.S. 642, 109 S. Ct. 2115, 104 L.Ed.2d 733 (1989).

Defendants also presented the testimony of Dr. Joseph B. Kadane, an eminently qualified statistician. Among his many credentials, Dr. Kadane is a full professor of statistics and social sciences at Carnegie Mellon University, headed the Department of Statistics there between 1972 and 1981 and is a Fellow of the American Statistical Association, having served on its board of directors and a number of its committees and held various editorships on its Journal. Dr. Kadane testified that in his opinion both the traffic and violator surveys were well designed, carefully performed and statistically reliable for analysis. From the surveys and the defense database, he calculated that a black was 4.85 times as likely as a white to be stopped between exits 1 and 3. This calculation led him to "suspect" a racially non-neutral stopping policy. While he noted that the surveys were done in 1993 and compared to data from 1988 to 1991, he was nevertheless satisfied that the comparisons were useable and accurate within a few percent. He was not concerned that the violator survey failed to count cars going less than sixty miles per hour and travelling behind Mr. Last when he started a session. He was concerned, however, with the fact that only 37.4% of the stops in the defense database were race identified.⁵ In order to determine if the comparisons were sensitive to the missing racial data, he did calculations performed on the log odds of being stopped. Whether he assumed the probability of having one's race recorded if black and stopped is the same as if white and stopped or two or three times as likely, the log odds were still greater than .99 that blacks were stopped at higher rates than whites on the Turnpike between exits 1 and 3 during the period April 1988 to May 1991. He therefore concluded that the comparisons were not sensitive to the missing racial data.

⁵That 62.6 percent of the stops in the defense database are not race identified is a consequence of both the destruction of the radio logs for ten of the thirty-five randomly selected days in accordance with the State Police document retention policy and the frequent dereliction of State Police members to comply with S.O.P. F3 effective July 13, 1984 requiring them to communicate by radio to their respective stations the race of all occupants of vehicles stopped prior to any contact.

Supposing that the disproportionate stopping of blacks was related to police discretion, the defense studied the traffic tickets issued by State Police members between exits 1 and 7A on the thirty-five randomly selected days broken down by State Police unit.⁶ There are 533 racially identified tickets in the databases issued by either the now disbanded Radar Unit, the Tactical Patrol Unit or general road troopers ("Patrol Unit"). The testimony indicates that the Radar Unit focused mainly on speeders using a radar van and chase cars and exercised limited discretion regarding which vehicles to stop. The Tac-Pac concentrates on traffic problems at specific locations and exercises somewhat more discretion as regards which vehicles to stop. Responsible to provide general law enforcement, the Patrol Unit exercises by far the most discretion among the three units. From Mr. Last's count, Dr. Lamberth computed that 18% of the tickets issued by the Radar Unit were to blacks, 23.8% of the tickets issued by the Tac-Pac were to blacks while 34.2% of the tickets issued by the Patrol Unit were to blacks. South of exit 3, Dr. Lamberth computed that 19.4% of the tickets issued by the Radar Unit were to blacks, 0.0% of the tickets issued by the Tac-Pac were to blacks while 43.8% of the tickets issued by the Patrol Unit were to blacks. In his opinion, the Radar Unit percentages are statistically consistent with the standard established by the violator survey, but the differences between the Radar Unit and the Patrol Unit between both exits 1 and 3 and 1 and 7A are statistically significant or well in excess of two standard deviations.

The State presented the testimony of Dr. Leonard Cupingood to challenge or refute the statistical evidence offered by the defense. I found Dr. Cupingood is qualified to give expert testimony in the field of statistics based on his Ph.D in statistics from Temple and his work experience with the Center for Forensic Economic Studies, a for profit corporation headquartered in Philadelphia. Dr. Cupingood collaborated with Dr. Bernard Siskin, his superior at the Center for Forensic Economic Studies and a former chairman of the Department of Statistics at Temple.

⁶Of the 3060 stops in the databases, 1292 are ticketed stops. Hence, no tickets were issued for nearly 60% of the stops.

Dr. Cupingood had no genuine criticism of the defense traffic survey. Rather, he centered his criticism of the defense statistical evidence on the violator survey. Throughout his testimony he maintained that the violator survey failed to capture the relevant data which he opined was the racial mix of those speeders most likely to be stopped or the "tail of the distribution." He even recommended the State authorize him to design a study to collect this data, but the State declined. He was unclear, though, how he would design a study to ascertain in a safe way the vehicle going the fastest above the speed limit at a given time at a given location and the race of its occupants without involving the credibility of State Police members. In any event, his supposition that maybe blacks drive faster than whites above the speed limit was repudiated by all State Police members called by the State who were questioned about it. Colonel Clinton Pagano, Trooper Donald Nemeth, Trooper Stephen Baumann and Detective Timothy Grant each testified that blacks drive indistinguishably from whites. Moreover, Dr. Cupingood acknowledged that he knew of no study indicating that blacks drive worse than whites. Nor could he reconcile the notion with the evidence that 37% of the unticketed stops between exits 1 and 7A in his database were black and 63% of those between exits 1 and 3. Dr. James Fyfe, a criminal justice professor at Temple who the defense called in its rebuttal case and who I found is qualified as an expert in police science and police procedures, also testified that there is nothing in the literature or in his personal experience to support the theory that blacks drive differently from whites.⁷

⁷During the hearing the State did attempt to introduce some annual speed surveys conducted on the Turnpike by the New Jersey Department of Transportation which the State represented would contradict a conclusion of the violator survey that 98.1% of the vehicles observed travelled in excess of sixty miles per hour. Besides noting that the State knew of these surveys long before the hearing and failed to produce them in discovery, I denied the proffer mainly because the surveys lacked racial data and also because there was a serious issue over their trustworthiness for admission under N.J.R.E. 803(c)(8) since the surveys were done to receive federal highway dollars. The critical information here is the racial mix of those eligible to be stopped, not the percentage of vehicles exceeding the speed limit.

Convinced in his belief that the defence 15% standard or benchmark was open to question, Dr. Cupingood attempted to find the appropriate benchmark to compare with the databases. He did three studies of presumed race-blind stops: night stops versus day stops; radar stops versus non-radar stops and drinking driving arrests triggered by calls for service.

In his study of night stops versus day stops, he compared the percentage of stops of blacks at night between exits 1 and 7A in the databases with the percentage of stops of blacks during daytime and found that night stops were 37.3% black versus 30.2% for daytime stops. Since he presumed the State Police generally cannot tell race at night, he concluded the higher percentage for night stops of blacks supported a standard well above 15%. His premise that the State Police generally cannot recognize race at night, however, is belied by the evidence. On July 16, 1994 between 9:40 p.m. and 11:00 p.m. Ahmad S. Corbitt, now an assistant deputy public defender, together with Investigator Minor of the Office of the Public Defender drove on the Turnpike at 55 miles per hour for a while and parked perpendicular to the Turnpike at a rest stop for a while to see if they could make out the races of the occupants of the vehicles they observed. Mr. Corbitt testified that the two could identify blacks versus whites about 80% of the time in the moving mode and close to 100% in the stationary mode. Over and above this proof is the fact the databases establish that the State Police only stopped an average of eight black occupied vehicles per night between exits 1 and 7A. Dr. Cupingood conceded a trooper could probably identify one or two black motorists per night.

Next, in his study of radar stops versus non-radar stops, Dr. Cupingood focused on the race identified tickets where radar was used in the databases and found that 28.5% of them were issued to blacks. Since he assumed that radar is race neutral, he suggested 28.5% might be the correct standard. As Dr. Kadane said in rebuttal, this study is fundamentally flawed because it assumes what is in question or that the people stopped are the best measure of who is eligible to be stopped. If racial prejudice were afoot, the standard would be tainted. In addition, although a radar device is race-blind, the operator may not be. Of far more significance is the defense study comparing the traffic tickets issued by the Radar, Tac-Pac and Patrol Units which shows again that where radar is used by a unit concerned primarily with speeders and acting with little or no discretion like the Radar Unit, the percentage of tickets issued to blacks is consistent with their percentage on the highway.

And lastly in his effort to find the correct standard, Dr. Cupingood considered a DUI study done by Lieutenant Fred Madden, Administrative Officer of the Records and Identification Section of the State Police. Lt. Madden tabulated DUI arrests between July 1988 and June 1991 statewide, statewide excluding the State Police, for Troop D of the State Police which patrols the entire length of the Turnpike, for Moorestown Station of Troop D and for Moorestown Station south of exit 3 broken down by race and between patrol related versus calls for service (i.e. accidents, motorist aids and other-the arrested motorist coming to the attention of the State Police by a toll-taker or civilian). Since Dr. Cupingood believed DUI arrests from calls for service were race neutral, he adopted the percentage of DUI arrests of blacks for the Moorestown Station from calls for service of 23% as a possible standard. Like the radar stop study, the DUI arrest study is fundamentally flawed because it assumes what is in question. Further, he erred in assuming that DUI arrests from calls for service involve no discretion. While the encounters involve no discretion, the arrests surely do. He admitted that race/discretion may explain the following widespread statistics in the DUI arrest study:

Statewide (all departments)	12% black
Statewide (excluding State Police)	10.4% black
State Police	16% black
Troop D	23% black
Moorestown Station	34% black
Moorestown Station patrol related	41% black
Moorestown Station patrol related south of exit 3	50% black

After hearing the testimony of Kenneth Ruff and Kenneth Wilson, two former troopers called by the defense who were not re-appointed at the end of their terms and who said they were trained and coached to make race based "profile" stops to increase their criminal arrests, the State asked Dr. Cupingood to study the race identified stops in his database and see how many possessed the profile characteristics cited by Ruff and Wilson, particularly how many were young (30 or under), black and male. Dr. Cupingood found that only 11.6% of the race identified stops were of young black males and only 6.6% of all stops were of young black males.

To: All Counsel
March 4, 1996

The defense then conducted a profile study of its own. It concentrated on the race identified stops of just blacks issued tickets and found that an adult black male was present in 88% of the cases where the gender of all occupants could be determined and that where gender and age could be determined, a black male 30 or younger was present in 63% of the cases. The defense study is more probative because it does concentrate on just stops of blacks issued tickets eliminating misleading comparisons with totals including whites or whites and a 62.6% group of race unknowns. Neither side, of course, could consider whether the blacks stopped and not issued tickets possessed profile characteristics since the databases contain no information about them.

Dr. Cupingood's so-called Mantel-Haentzel analysis ended the statistical evidence. He put forward this calculation of "expected black tickets" in an attempt to disprove the defense study showing the Patrol Unit, the unit with the most discretion, ticketed blacks at a rate not only well above the Radar and Tac-Pac Units, but also well above the standard fixed by the violator survey. The calculation insinuates that the Patrol Unit issued merely 5 excess tickets to blacks beyond what would have been expected. The calculation is worthless. First and foremost, Dr. Cupingood deleted the non-radar tickets which presumably involved a greater exercise of discretion. The role police discretion played in the issuance of tickets to blacks was the object of the defense study. Under the guise of comparing only things similarly situated, he thereupon deleted any radar tickets not issued in one of the four time periods he divided each of the thirty-five randomly selected days into for which there was not at least one race identified radar ticket issued by the Patrol Unit and at least one by the combined Radar, Tac-Pac Unit. He provided no justification for either creating the 140 time periods or combining the tickets of the Radar and Tac-Pac Units. To compound his defective analysis, he pooled the data in each time period into a single number and employed the resultant weighted average of the two units to compute the expected and excess, if any, tickets issued to blacks. By using weighted averages, he once again assumed the answer to the question he purported to address. He assumed the Patrol Unit gave the same number of tickets to blacks as did the Radar, Tac-Pac Unit, rather than test to see if they did. Even after "winnowing" the data, the comparison between the Patrol Unit and the Radar, Tac-Pac Unit is marginally statistically significant. Without winnowing, Dr. Kadane found the comparison of the radar tickets issued by the Patrol Unit to blacks with the radar tickets issued by the Radar, Tac-Pac Unit to blacks constituted 3.78 standard deviations which is distinctly above the 5% standard of statistical significance.

The defense did not rest on its statistical evidence alone. Along with the testimony of former troopers Kenneth Ruff and Kenneth Wilson about having been trained and coached to make race based profile stops but whose testimony is weakened by bias related to their not having been reappointed at the end of their terms, the defense elicited evidence through cross-examination of State witnesses and a rebuttal witness, Dr. James Fyfe, that the State Police hierarchy allowed, condoned, cultivated and tolerated discrimination between 1988 and 1991 in its crusade to rid New Jersey of the scourge of drugs.

Conjointly with the passage of the Comprehensive Drug Reform Act of 1987 and to advance the Attorney General's Statewide Action Plan for Narcotics Enforcement issued in January 1988 which "directed that the enforcement of our criminal drug laws shall be the highest priority law enforcement activity", Colonel Pagano formed the Drug Interdiction Training Unit (DITU) in late 1987 consisting of two supervisors and ten other members, two from each Troop selected for their successful seizure statistics, "...to actually patrol with junior road personnel and provide critical on-the-job training in recognizing potential violators." State Police Plan For Action dated July 7, 1987, at p. 14. According to Colonel Pagano, the DITU program was intended to be one step beyond the existing coach program to impart to newer troopers insight into drug enforcement and the "criminal program" (patrol related arrests) in general. DITU was disbanded in or around July 1992.

No training materials remain regarding the training DITU members themselves received, and few training materials remain regarding the training DITU members provided the newer troopers except for a batch of checklists.⁸ Just one impact study was ever prepared regarding the effectiveness of the DITU program rather than periodic impact evaluations and studies as required by S.O.P. F4 dated ⁸Although DITU kept copies of all arrest, operations and investigation reports and consent to search forms growing out of encounters with the public during training for a time at its office, the copies were destroyed sometime in 1989 or 1990 and before they were sought in discovery. The originals of these reports and forms were filed at the trainee's station and incorporated into the State Police "traditional reporting system" making them impossible to ferret out now.

January 12, 1989, but this one undated report marked D-62 in evidence only provided statistics about the number of investigations conducted, the number of persons involved and the quantity and value of drugs seized without indicating the race of those involved or the number of fruitless investigations broken down by race. In the opinion of Dr. Fyfe, retention of training materials is important for review of the propriety of the training and to discern agency policy, and preparation of periodic impact evaluations and studies is important not only to determine the effectiveness of the program from a numbers standpoint, but more than that to enable administration to monitor and control the quality of the program and its impact on the public, especially a crackdown program like DITU which placed so much emphasis on stopping drug transportation by the use of "consents" to search following traffic stops in order to prevent constitutional excesses.

Despite the paucity of training materials and lack of periodic and complete impact evaluations and studies, a glimpse of the work of DITU emerges from the preserved checklists and the testimony of Sergeants Brian Caffrey and David Cobb. Sergeant Caffrey was the original assistant supervisor of DITU and became the supervisor in 1989. Sergeant Cobb was an original member of DITU and became the assistant supervisor in 1989. Sergeant Caffrey left DITU sometime in 1992, Sergeant Cobb sometime in 1991. Both testified that a major purpose of DITU was to teach trainees tip-offs and techniques about what to look for and do to talk or "dig" their way into a vehicle after, not before, a motor vehicle stop to effectuate patrol related arrests. Both denied teaching or using race as a tip-off either before or after a stop. Nevertheless, Sergeant Caffrey condoned a comment by a DITU trainer during the time he was the supervisor of DITU stating:

"Trooper Fash previously had DITU training, and it showed in the way he worked. He has become a little reluctant to stop cars in lieu [sic] of the Channel 9 News Report. He was told as long as he uses Title 39 he can stop any car he wants. He enjoys DITU and would like to ride again."

As the defense observes in its closing brief, "Why would a trooper who is acting in a racially neutral fashion become reluctant to stop cars as a result of a news story charging that racial minorities were being targeted [by the New Jersey State Police]?" Even A.A.G. Ronald Susswein, Deputy Director of the Division of Criminal Justice, acknowledged that this comment is incomplete because it fails to add the caveat, "as long as he doesn't also use race or ethnicity." Further, Sergeant Caffrey testified that "ethnicity is something to keep in mind" albeit not a tip-off and that he taught attendees at both the annual State Police in-service training session in March 1987 and the special State Police in-service training sessions in July and August 1987 that Hispanics are mainly involved in drug trafficking and showed them the film Operation Pipeline wherein the ethnicity of those arrested, mostly Hispanics, is prominently depicted. Dr. Fyfe criticized Sergeant Caffrey's teaching Hispanics are mainly involved and his showing Operation Pipeline as well as the showing of the Jamaican Posse film wherein only blacks are depicted as drug traffickers at the 1989 annual State Police in-service training session saying trainers should not teach what they do not intend their trainees to act upon. At a minimum, teaching Hispanics are mainly involved in drug trafficking and showing films depicting mostly Hispanics and blacks trafficking in drugs at training sessions worked at cross-purposes with concomitant instruction pointing out that neither race nor ethnicity may be considered in making traffic stops.

Key corroboration for finding the State Police hierarchy allowed and tolerated discrimination came from Colonel Pagano. Colonel Pagano was Superintendent of the State Police from 1975 to February 1990. He testified there was a noisy demand in the 1980s to get drugs off the streets. In accord, Attorney General Cary Edwards and he made drug interdiction the number one priority of law enforcement. He helped formulate the Attorney General's Statewide Action Plan for Narcotics Enforcement and established DITU within the State Police. He kept an eye on DITU through conversations with staff officers and Sergeants Mastella and Caffrey and review of reports generated under the traditional reporting system and reports like D-62 in evidence. He had no thought DITU would engage in constitutional violations. He knew all State Police members were taught that they were guardians of the Constitution and that targeting any race was unconstitutional and poor police practice to boot. He recognized it was his responsibility to see that race was not a factor in who was stopped, searched and arrested. When he became Superintendent, he formed the Internal Affairs Bureau to investigate citizen complaints against State Police members to maintain the integrity of the Division. Substantiated deviations from regulations resulted in sanctions, additional training or counseling.

More telling, however, is what Colonel Pagano said and did, or did not do, in response to the Channel 9 exposé entitled "Without Just Cause" which aired in 1989 and which concerned Trooper Fash and what he did not do in response to complaints of profiling from the NAACP and ACLU and these consolidated motions to suppress and similar motions in Warren and Middlesex Counties. He said to Joe Collum of Channel 9 that "[violating rights of motorists was] of serious concern [to him], but no where near the concern that I think we have got to look to in trying to correct some of the problems we find with the criminal element in this State" and "the bottom line is that those stops were not made on the basis of race alone." (emphasis added) Since perhaps these isolated comments were said inadvertently or edited out of context, a truer reflection of his attitude about claims of racism would appear to be his videotaped remarks shown all members of the State Police at roll call in conjunction with the WOR series. Thereon he clearly said that he did not want targeting or discriminatory enforcement and that "[w]hen you put on this uniform, you leave your biases and your prejudices behind." But he also said as regarded the charge of a Trenton school principal named Jones that he had been stopped on the Turnpike and threatened, intimidated and assaulted by a trooper, "We know that the teacher assaulted the trooper. He didn't have a driver's license or a registration for his fancy new Mercedes." (emphasis added) And he called Paul McLemore, the first African-American trooper in New Jersey and now a practicing attorney and who spoke of discrimination within the ranks of the State Police, "an ingrate." And he told the members to "keep the heat on" and then assured them:

"...[H]ere at Division Headquarters we'll make sure that when the wheels start to squeak, we'll do whatever we can to make sure that you're supported out in the field. ...Anything that goes toward implementing the Drug Reform Act is important. And, we'll handle the squeaky wheels here."

He admitted the Internal Affairs Bureau was not designed to investigate general complaints, so he could not refer the general complaints of discrimination to it for scrutiny. Yet he never requested the Analytical Unit to investigate stop data from radio logs, patrol charts and tickets or search and seizure data from arrest reports, operations reports, investigation reports and consent to search forms, not even after the Analytical Unit informed him in a report on arrests by region, race and crime that he had requested from it for his use in the WOR series that "... arrests are not a valid reflection of stops (data relative to stops with respect to race is not compiled)." The databases compiled for these motions attest, of course, to the fact that race identified stop data could have been compiled. He testified he could not launch an investigation into every general complaint because of limited resources and that there was insufficient evidence of discrimination in the Channel 9 series, the NAACP and ACLU complaints and the various motions to suppress for him to spend his "precious" resources. In short, he left the issue of discrimination up to the courts and months of testimony in this and other counties at State expense.

The right to be free from discrimination is firmly supported by the Fourteenth Amendment to the United States Constitution and the protections of Article I, paragraphs 1 and 5 of the New Jersey Constitution of 1947. To be sure, "[t]he eradication of the 'cancer of discrimination' has long been one of our State's highest priorities." Dixon v. Rutgers, The State University of N.J., 110 N.J. 432, 451 (1988). It is indisputable, therefore, that the police may not stop a motorist based on race or any other invidious classification. See State v. Kuhn, 213 N.J. Super. 275 (1986).

Generally, however, the inquiry for determining the constitutionality of a stop or a search and seizure is limited to "whether the conduct of the law enforcement officer who undertook the [stop or] search was objectively reasonable, without regard to his or her underlying motives or intent." State v. Bruzzese, 94 N.J. 210 (1983). Thus, it has been said that the courts will not inquire into the motivation of a police officer whose stop of a vehicle was based upon a traffic violation committed in his presence. See United States v. Smith, 799 F.2d 704, 708-709 (11th Cir. 1986); United States v. Hollman, 541 F.2d 196, 198 (8th Cir. 1976); cf. United States v. Villamonte - Marquez, 462 U.S. 579, 103 S.Ct. 2573, 77 L.Ed.2d 22 (1983). But where objective evidence establishes "that a police agency has embarked upon an officially sanctioned or de facto policy of targeting minorities for investigation and arrest," any evidence seized will be suppressed to deter future insolence in office by those charged with enforcement of the law and to maintain judicial integrity. State v. Kennedy, 247 N.J. Super. 21 (App. Div. 1991).

Statistics may be used to make out a case of targeting minorities for prosecution of traffic offenses provided the comparison is between the racial composition of the motorist population violating the traffic laws and the racial composition of those arrested for traffic infractions on the relevant roadway patrolled by the police agency. Wards Cove Packing Co. v. Atonio, supra; State v. Kennedy, 247 N.J. Super. at 33-34. While defendants have the burden of proving "the existence of purposeful discrimination," discriminatory intent may be inferred from statistical proof presenting a stark pattern or an even less extreme pattern in certain limited contexts. McCleskey v. Kemp, 481 U.S. 279, 107 S.Ct. 1756, 95 L. Ed. 2d 262 (1987). Kennedy, supra, implies that discriminatory intent may be inferred from statistical proof in a traffic stop context probably because only uniform variables (Title 39 violations) are relevant to the challenged stops and the State has an opportunity to explain the statistical disparity. "[A] selection procedure that is susceptible of abuse... supports the presumption of discrimination raised by the statistical showing." Castaneda v. Partida, 430 U.S. 482, 494, 97 S. Ct. 1272, 51 L.Ed. 2d 498 (1977).

Once defendants expose a prima facie case of selective enforcement, the State generally cannot rebut it by merely calling attention to possible flaws or unmeasured variables in defendants' statistics. Rather, the State must introduce specific evidence showing that either there actually are defects which bias the results or the missing factors, when properly organized and accounted for, eliminate or explain the disparity. Bazemore v. Friday, 478 U.S. 385, 106 S.Ct. 3000, 92 L. Ed. 2d 315 (1986); EEOC

v. General Telephone Co. of Northwest, Inc., 885 F.2d 575 (9th Cir. 1989). Nor will mere denials or reliance on the good faith of the officers suffice. Castaneda v. Partida, 430 U.S. at 498 n. 19.

Here, defendants have proven at least a de facto policy on the part of the State Police out of the Moorestown Station of targeting blacks for investigation and arrest between April 1988 and May 1991 both south of exit 3 and between exits 1 and 7A of the Turnpike. Their surveys satisfy Wards Cove, supra. The statistical disparities and standard deviations revealed are indeed stark. The discretion devolved upon general road troopers to stop any car they want as long as Title 39 is used evinces a selection process that is susceptible of abuse. The utter failure of the State Police hierarchy to monitor and control a crackdown program like DITU or investigate the many claims of institutional discrimination manifests its indifference if not acceptance. Against all this, the State submits only denials and the conjecture and flawed studies of Dr. Cupingood.

The eradication of illegal drugs from our State is an obviously worthy goal, but not at the expense of individual rights. As Justice Brandeis so wisely said dissenting in Olmstead v. United States, 277 U.S. 438, 479 (1928):

"Experience should teach us to be most on our guard to protect liberty when the government's purposes are beneficent. Men born to freedom are naturally alert to repel invasion of their liberty by evil-minded rulers. The greatest dangers to liberty lurk in insidious encroachment by men of zeal, well-meaning but without understanding."

Mr. Wintner should submit a form of order consistent with this opinion under the 5 day rule.

Very truly yours,

ROBERT E. FRANCIS, J.S.C.

SUBJECT: United States Commission on Civil Rights - New Jersey Advisory Commission

At the briefing for the Attorney General on March 4, you undertook to prepare further briefing materials with respect to the status of the recommendations which the New Jersey Advisory Committee presented to the Attorney General in September 1994. These should include what action, if any, has been undertaken to implement recommendations or why we have chosen not to pursue them. To the extent implementation would require legislation, there should probably be an explanation of why such legislation was not deemed advisable.

The meeting with the delegation from the Advisory Committee is now scheduled for 10:00 a.m. on Monday, March 18, 1996. It is imperative that this briefing material be received in sufficient time for everyone to have the opportunity to review it prior to the meeting and that you be prepared to discuss the relevant issues at the meeting.

We have requested the Commission provide an agenda of topics for the meeting, which we hope will be forthcoming. However, we have been advised that they will want to talk about the Gloucester County Turnpike stop case, in which the opinion was issued last Friday.

SUBJECT : United States Commission on Civil Rights
New Jersey Advisory Committee Recommendations

You have requested what if any actions have been taken with respect to the Advisory Committee's recommendations. The following constitutes the response of the Division to this request. A copy of the eight recommendations are attached for your convenience.

1. Improve Candidate Screening

The Division has traditionally had one of the most extensive and innovative selection processes in American policing. In keeping with that pattern, a more extensive and modern psychological screening process for applicants was introduced in 1993 by contracting with Law Enforcement Psychological Services Inc. This group provides a far more extensive screening process than the standard psychological battery we had been using previously. In addition a new entrance examination designed to select the best candidates has been utilized since 1993.

2. Enhanced Basic and In-Service Training

There has been ongoing updated basic and in-service training within the Division. There has been no specific training on intercultural and intergroup communication and awareness. The EEO/AA Bureau has been involved in supervisory and in service training regarding department policies on hostile work environment and discrimination.

3. Performance Evaluations of an Officers Sensitivity

No Action.

4. Feedback Loops

NJSP 286

OAG 006858

SP 128327

No action as far as soliciting comment from the citizenry on a regular basis. The Division does attempt to stay in touch with the community by sending representatives from the Colonel down to community events and meetings of various groups. Further, we aggressively investigate all complaints made against Division personnel.

5. Legislation

Not applicable.

6. Report Misconduct/Bias by Police to State Police

The Division has no position on this recommendation.

7. Do More Minority Recruiting

The Division aggressively pursues minority recruitment. Personnel from diverse backgrounds are temporarily assigned and at least double our dedicated recruiting unit, a unique entity unto itself.

Presently we have a list of 5,500 interested persons on file to be notified of the next test.

8. Grand Jury investigation of Death and Serious Bodily Injury caused by Police

Not applicable.

I hope this information is of some use to you. If you have any questions, please do not hesitate to call.

Carl A. Williams
Colonel
Superintendent

(4) Like the policy established by Prosecutor Tate in Essex County, presentation to a grand jury of all cases where police action results in death or serious bodily injury is an important policy.

(5) A majority of police contact with the public is routine and without problems. Indeed, most community residents enjoy the protection and attention to duty they receive from police officers. Moreover, police officers increasingly must take on additional tasks involving human services that call for skills better assigned to other agencies.

To address these concerns, the New Jersey Advisory Committee presents the following recommendations:

(1) The New Jersey State attorney general should undertake to improve the policies for screening candidates for law enforcement careers. In addition, if patterns of misconduct become evident after employment, local policy makers or chiefs of police should take immediate action in the form of either additional specialized training or termination from the police force.

(2) The New Jersey State attorney general should devise standardized training to upgrade the quality of police services in the State and establish a mandatory curriculum of in-service training courses for all officers. Linked to this general need for training is a special concern for instruction in intercultural and intergroup communication and awareness.

(3) Performance evaluations of local law enforcement personnel should include evaluation and assessment of the officer's sensitivity to intercultural awareness and diversity.

(4) Local police departments should create "feedback loops" to measure the quality of service and professional conduct of their police officers. For example, attached to any traffic citation could be a simple questionnaire asking the recipient questions regarding the conduct, courtesy, and demeanor of the police officer. To the extent that patterns of less than professional conduct become apparent, appropriate administrative actions would be taken. This feedback information should be used to improve the quality of police work and assessment of police officer performances.

(5) Legislation should be enacted to mandate county level formation of bias incident review committees (BIRC) to investigate and screen complaints, including complaints of omission, unresponsiveness, etc., against police officers. A county level BIRC should educate the community by disseminating materials explaining civilian complaint procedures, including materials for language minorities. In this regard, the committee and materials from Middlesex County make a useful model.

(6) The New Jersey State attorney general should require law enforcement agencies to record all complaints of bias and misconduct against police officers and to file monthly reports with the New Jersey State police. The New Jersey State attorney general should issue an annual report. The reports should include information on the disposition of the complaint.

(7) Law enforcement agencies should improve their efforts to recruit candidates from all major ethnic groups in the community that they serve.

(8) The New Jersey State attorney general should require that all police actions resulting in death or serious bodily injury should be investigated by a grand jury.

TROOPER OF THE YEAR AWARD 1998

During a ten month period culminating on May 1, 1998, Tpr. John I. Hogan #5068 initiated thirty five (35) patrol related investigations which were started by routine motor vehicle stops. These stops occurred while Tpr. Hogan was assigned as a General Road Duty Trooper at the Troop "D" Cranbury Barracks. During the course of these 35 investigations, criminal charges were filed for Possession of CDS, Possession With Intent to Distribute, Possession of CDW, Possession of Pirated Videos, Eluding, Theft of Services, Possession of Narcotic Paraphernalia (including hidden compartments) and Money Laundering. During this period sixty-one persons were arrested by Tpr. Hogan which resulted in the filing of one hundred and twenty two (122) criminal charges.

Confiscated during these investigations were an estimated two hundred (200) pounds of marijuana valued at $400,000.00. Also seized were an estimated twenty (20) pounds of cocaine valued at $300,000.00, approximately two (2) pounds of heroin valued at $128,000.00 and U.S. currency in the amount of $17,000.00. Furthermore, Tpr. Hogan confiscated six (6) deadly weapons which included four (4) assault style weapons containing high capacity magazines and hollow point ammunition. A subject wanted for homicide out of Philadelphia, PA. was also arrested by Tpr. Hogan and is now being prosecuted for the drug related murder.

During the course of some of these investigations, Tpr. Hogan has worked closely with the Drug Enforcement Agency, New York and Philadelphia Police Departments, as well as the NJSP's PRS and Intelligence Units. Two of these cases have led Tpr. Hogan to develop confidential informants which, in one instance, the informant was turned over to the DEA. This informant is still working with the DEA and Cranbury Station Detectives and to date has delivered in excess of $150,000.00 worth of heroin. Also seized, as a result of this informant, have been two motor vehicles and an additional two subjects have been arrested. The second informant is also still working and to date has been in contact with the NJSP's Narcotic Unit who have assumed the responsibility for further continuing of the investigation. Both of these informants were cultivated by Tpr. Hogan during the course of his investigation and his courteous conduct in dealing with these subjects once they were placed under arrest.

On April 24, 1998, Tpr. Hogan was involved in an on duty incident during which time he was struck in the right leg by a motor vehicle and injured his lower back and leg. He has since been on sick leave recuperating. Tpr. Hogan has demonstrated, by referring to the activities in this report, that he is among the best that the New Jersey State Police have to offer. It is with this in mind that I feel he is extremely deserving of being the New Jersey State Police's 1998 TROOPER OF THE YEAR.

Attached is a synopsis of Tpr. Hogan's activities.

5/98	Capt. R. H. Franz Commanding Troop "D" 27/8	Major A. J. Sparano Supervisor Field Operations ASD	RECOMMENDATION FOR COMMENDATION TROOPER JOHN HOGAN #5068

Attached find the Special Report of Sergeant F. Gasior #3388, Squad 6 Supervisor, Cranbury Station, endorsed by SFC W. Vowell, Temporary Acting Station Commander, Cranbury Station. Both Sergeant Gasior and SFC Vowell feel that Trooper John Hogan #5068 should be commended for his work performance during the year of 1997.

Between January 10, 1997 and December 6, 1997, Trooper John Hogan conducted 26 investigations which resulted in the arrest of 46 persons for 87 charges which included crimes such as Possession of CDS, Possession of CDS with Intent to Distribute, Possession of a CDW, Theft, Possession of Stolen Property and Fugitive from Justice wanted by another jurisdiction for a Homicide.

Trooper Hogan recovered illicit drugs, currency, stolen property and forfeited vehicles for a total recovered property value of $710,225.00.

These activities demonstrate Trooper Hogan's energetic, diligent, aggressive and alert approach to his patrol responsibilities. I concur with SFC Vowell and Sergeant Gasior that Trooper Hogan is worthy of Division recognition and I recommend he be awarded a Letter of Commendation.

Attached to this report is Sergeant F. Gasior's Special Report which gives a breakdown of the Division case numbers, dates, criminal charges, patrol related arrests and value recovered of Trooper Hogan's 26 patrol related investigations.

REQUEST FOR RECOGNITION OF TROOPER JOHN HOGAN'S PERFORMANCE

The activities listed in conjunction with this report are evidence of Tpr. Hogan's consistent performance and dedication to duty which reflects great credit upon himself as well as the Division of State Police. Activities such as these are an indication of Tpr. Hogan's willingness to extend himself beyond what would normally be expected of a General Road Duty Trooper. It is respectfully requested that Tpr. Hogan be recognized for his exemplary performance which is indicative of the outstanding State Police Training that he has received.

I have reviewed the attached special report from Sgt. Fred Gasior, Squad #6 supervisor, requesting recognition for the activities of Tpr. John Hogan during the 1997 calendar year and I concur with Sgt. Gasior's request. Tpr. Hogan's activities are exemplary and bring great credit to the Division of State Police. RECOMMENDATION FOR COMMENDATION TO:

Trooper John Hogan #5068

Reference: Apprehension of two subjects for aggravated assault, resisting arrest, possession of a stolen motor vehicle, possession of narcotic paraphernalia and possession of burglary tools. Both accused shot and wounded by Tpr. Hogan during his investigation, attempted apprehension and response to the life and death situation that he was placed by the accused.

On Wednesday, March 22, 1995 Tpr. John Hogan #5068 discharged his service weapon and wounded two subjects after they attempted to resist arrest and flee the area in their vehicle. While in the course of their attempt, Tpr. Hogan was dragged by the vehicle and injured. The examination of the circumstances surrounding these events and the subsequent actions by Tpr. Hogan serve to illustrate personal bravery, dedication to duty and his extreme professionalism. It is therefore my privilege and duty to explain the circumstances and recommend a Commendation for Tpr. Hogan.

On the above listed date, Tpr. Hogan, New Brunswick Station Troop D, was working the day shift (6a -4P) and was assigned an area of the New Jersey Turnpike inclusive of mileposts 61 through 73. At approximately 1230hrs. he was traveling on the SNO roadway around MP75 when he made a right turn onto to u-turn ramp which would enable him to head back to the NSO roadway. The indicated u-turn is a two lane overpass and is posted "Authorized Vehicles Only".

Tpr. Hogan drove up the u-turn ramp, crossed over the Turnpike and headed back down the u-turn ramp towards the NSO roadway. At the foot of the u-turn ramp Tpr. Hogan observed a white Volkswagon Jetta that was occupied by two black males. The Jetta was in the process of making an illegal u-turn. At that point, Tpr. Hogan's vehicle was facing southbound and the Jetta was facing northbound on the u-turn ramp.

Tpr. Hogan questioned the driver, later identified as William Smith Jr. Jersey City, N.J., as to why he was using the u-turn. The driver appeared to be nervous and claimed that he was lost enroute to Jersey City. Tpr. Hogan advised the driver that use of the u-turn was illegal and he then requested the driver to produce driver's license, registration and insurance card. Tpr. Hogan noticed that the passenger, later identified as Bruce Adams also of Jersey City, N.J., appeared to be extremely nervous and was fidgeting in the right front seat. Tpr. Hogan told the driver to stay where he was and turned his Troop Car around and positioned it behind the Jetta. He then radioed the stop into New Brunswick Station.

Tpr. Hogan approached the driver's side and requested the driver to again produce his driving credentials. The driver could not produce any paperwork and stated that it was his uncle's car. Tpr. Hogan requested the driver to exit the vehicle and upon exiting was patted down for safety reasons. While patting down the driver, a hard object was felt in the left chest area of the driver's jacket. After inquiring as to what the object was, the driver responded that he did not know. Tpr. Hogan, in fear for his personal safety, removed the object that was a glass crack pipe wrapped in a white paper towel. Continuing to pat down the driver, Tpr. Hogan asked the driver what his name was. First he indicated his name to be John Smith and then said it was Johnny Smith. During the time that Tpr. Hogan was patting down the driver, he continued to observe the passenger moving around in the front seat in a nervous manner. After the pat down was completed, the driver was ordered to sit on the front hood of the troop car.

As Tpr. Hogan approached the passenger, the driver jumped off the hood of the troop car and began to walk towards the driver side of the Jetta. He was ordered to return and not to move again. The driver first started back towards the troop car but turned and ran back towards the Jetta and jumped into the driver's seat. Tpr. Hogan arrived at the driver's window at the same time that the Jetta began to move forward. He ran parallel with the moving vehicle continually ordering the driver to stop.

Tpr. Hogan realized that the driver was not going to stop so he (Tpr. Hogan) reached into the driver's window and attempted to stop the vehicle by turning off the ignition. The Jetta continued moving forward with Tpr. Hogan hanging onto the driver's door with both hands and arms. The Jetta quickly accelerated which caused Tpr. Hogan to lose his balance. He was now being dragged along side of the car as it traveled up the u-turn ramp. While being dragged, Tpr. Hogan continually ordered the driver to stop. As the vehicle moved faster, Tpr. Hogan's left arm lost its grip and he was now clutching the door with only his right arm.

With the driver not stopping and with Tpr. Hogan holding on with only his right arm, Tpr. Hogan feared that if he let go of his grip, he would slide underneath the Jetta and would be run over by the rear tires. At this point, he determined that the only way to stop the Jetta and avoid serious personal injury was to draw and fire his service weapon. Tpr. Hogan, who is left handed, unholstered his weapon and pointed it at the driver. As the driver reached for Tpr. Hogan's weapon, Tpr. Hogan discharged his weapon three times. Two of the rounds struck the driver, one in his hand and one in his cheek. The remaining round struck the passenger in the thigh. As Tpr. Hogan fell backwards onto the pavement, he saw the Jetta collide head on with another marked troop car that was arriving to back him up. This vehicle was operated by Tpr. Justin McCarthy, who along with Tpr. Hogan, secured the scene and rendered first aid to the suspects.

The actions displayed by Tpr. Hogan during this incident represent great personal credit to himself as well as to the Division of State Police. These actions are in the highest traditions and standards of the New Jersey State Police and deserve the recognition associated with such acts of bravery. This Trooper is to be commended for his devotion to duty, sense of responsibility, commitment to the safety of the citizens of the State of New Jersey and his personal valor and fearlessness.

Respectfully Submitted for Your Consideration

REQUEST FOR RECOGNITION OF TROOPER JOHN HOGAN'S PERFORMANCE

The activities listed in conjunction with this report are evidence of Tpr. Hogan's consistent performance and dedication to duty which reflects great credit upon himself as well as the Division of State Police. Activities such as these are an indication of Tpr. Hogan's willingness to extend himself beyond what would normally be expected of a General Road Duty Trooper. It is respectfully requested that Tpr. Hogan be recognized for his exemplary performance which is indicative of the outstanding State Police Training that he has received.

Their continued dedication to accomplishing their mission reflects great credit upon themselves and the New Jersey State Police. The aforementioned personnel have achieved significant results while combating extensive drug distribution, money laundering of drug proceeds and related criminal activities in geographic areas having access to New York City and major transportation venues, such as Newark International Airport. Over the past seven years their covert operations have yielded seizures of U.S. currency in excess of $10 million dollars and illegal narcotics valued in excess of $50 million dollars.

The continued success of the Unit can be directly attributed to the teamwork, dedication and numerous sacrifices made by each member of the investigative team. Their individual strengths and abilities have produced consistent unprecedented results.

These individuals assigned to the "Hotel Interdiction Squad" have made significant contributions while conducting themselves in accordance with the highest standards of the Division of State Police.

Their substantial contribution to the statewide anti-narcotics effort are evident by the past year's accomplishments, which include the seizures of illegal narcotics valued at $995,500.00; $314,259.00 in U.S. currency of drug proceeds; six vehicles valued at $101,000.00 and several weapons.

The impact of their efforts reflect positively upon our communities, our schools, places of work and the safety of our citizens.

The attached synopsis of noteworthy investigations and statistics illustrate their professional abilities.

NOTEWORTHY CASES:

H096-96-01 - Hotel/Motel detectives working cooperatively with detectives from the N.J.S.P. Auto Unit initiated an investigation involving individuals possessing counterfeit New Jersey Driver's Licenses. These individuals were guests at an airport hotel; therefore, this investigation was turned over to the Hotel Squad for continuance. This subsequent investigation by Hotel Squad detectives culminated in the arrests of three subjects found to be in possession of $6,127 cash, 1/2 ounce of cocaine valued at $500, less than fifty grams of marijuana valued at $50, and a cloned cellular phone valued at $200. Additional investigation by Hotel Squad detectives revealed that two of the subjects were wanted for a homicide investigation in the states of California and Hawaii. Information provided to these agencies by Squad members enhanced their respective investigations. Members of a Task Force from the states of Hawaii and California immediately travelled to New Jersey to continue their investigation.

H096-96-13 - Hotel Squad detectives initiated an investigation of hotel guests, suspected members of a money laundering and narcotics trafficking network. A protracted surveillance in New York and New Jersey resulted in the arrest of three subjects and the seizure of their $18,000 vehicle which was equipped with a hidden compartment. $5,023 in U.S. currency was also seized and Squad detectives were able to provide federal authorities in Texas with crucial information that enhanced an on-going multi-state wiretap investigation.

H096-96-16 - Hotel Squad detectives initiated an investigation of two hotel guests suspected of money laundering. Intelligence information, coupled with surveillance activity resulted in the arrest of both subjects and the seizure of $50,000 in money orders and $4,509 in U.S. currency.

H096-96-26 - Investigation initiated by Hotel Squad detectives regarding a hotel employee seeking to hire a "hitman" to murder his wife's boyfriend. Hotel Squad members acted immediately to supply the hotel employee with a pager number of a N.J.S.P. undercover detective with whom he contracted to carry out his request. As a result, this individual was arrested for conspiracy to commit aggravated assault and theft.

H096-96-32 - This investigation originates at Newark Airport when U.S. Customs inspectors arrested an individual who had ingested 1.09 kilos of heroin valued at $177,000. This investigation was then turned over to Hotel Squad detectives to facilitate a controlled delivery at an airport hotel. As a result, two subjects were arrested by Hotel Squad detectives when they attempted to take control of the heroin.

H096-96-45 - This investigation originated at Newark Airport when customs inspectors arrested a subject who had ingested one kilo of heroin valued at $175,000 for transport into the U.S. This investigation was then turned over to Hotel Squad detectives to facilitate a controlled delivery at an airport hotel. As a result, Hotel Squad detectives arrested three additional subjects when they arrived to take control of the heroin. These subjects were further charged with utilizing a six-year old child as a part of the narcotics scheme.

H096-96-46 - This investigation of an individual who was a guest at a hotel was initiated by members of the Hotel Squad, the guest was believed to be involved in a loansharking operation. As a result, Hotel Squad detectives arrested one subject for loansharking and conspiracy to commit loansharking. This investigation uncovered an illegal loan operation actively working between New York and New Jersey. This information was subsequently forwarded to an FBI Task Force in New York City.

H096-96-48 - Hotel Squad detectives initiated an investigation of a hotel guest who was on Ocean County's ten most wanted list, Squad detectives arrested the subject upon his departure from the hotel.

H096-96-49 - This investigation was initiated by Hotel Squad detectives regarding a guest at a hotel who was a known fugitive from the state of Florida. This subject was also a principle in a money laundering investigation. A protracted surveillance resulted in the subject's arrest and the seizure of $41,844 in U.S. currency.

H096-96-51 - This investigation was initiated by Hotel Squad detectives of several individuals who were guests at a hotel. These individuals were known suspects in a money laundering operation between Texas and New Jersey. Hotel Squad detectives conducted many hours of surveillance on these individuals over a two-day period. A choreographed road stop of one of their vehicles resulted in the seizure of $22,458 in U.S. currency. Further investigation revealed that their three companions had just departed Newark Airport en route to Houston, Texas. Task Force members at Houston Airport were alerted which resulted in an additional currency seizure of $247,360. Squad members were able to provide additional information to Texas authorities which further aided their investigation.

H096-96-75 - Hotel Squad members initiated an investigation of an individual staying at a hotel who was believed to be receiving UPS packages containing narcotics. This individual was then apprehended with said package which contained 6 grams of methamphetamine valued at $600 and prescription drugs not in their original container valued at $60.

H096-96-78 - Hotel Squad members initiated an investigation of an individual staying at a hotel who was a known fugitive from the City of Newark, New Jersey for $50,000 in numerous outstanding warrants. Squad members had arrested this individual in the past and began to check several locations known to be frequented by him. After several days, he was located and placed under arrest. He was also found to be in possession of a loaded handgun valued at $500 for which he was charged.

H096-96-83 - Hotel Squad members initiated an investigation of an individual staying at a hotel who had been acting suspiciously. Hotel Squad members initiated a surveillance of this individual who was arrested when he was found to be in possession of a stolen vehicle valued at $5,000.

H096-96-84 - Hotel Squad members initiated an investigation of several individuals staying at a hotel believed to be involved in the transportation of narcotics in hidden compartments of their vehicle. After several days of surveillance, two individuals were arrested when 2 kilos of crack cocaine, valued at $60,000 were found secreted within a hidden compartment in their vehicle. In addition, $1,036 in U.S. Currency was seized along with their vehicle valued at $10,000.

H093-96-01 - This investigation originated at Newark Airport when customs inspectors arrested a subject who had ingested 1 kilo of heroin valued at $150,000 for transport into the United States. U.S. Customs Agents then turned this investigation over to Hotel Squad members in order to facilitate a controlled delivery of the heroin at a hotel. Hotel Squad members set up an extensive surveillance of the hotel room where the exchange was to be made with other unknown individuals. Eventually, four additional individuals were arrested by Squad members as they attempted to take the package of heroin.

H093-96-02 - Hotel Squad members initiated an investigation of several individuals staying at a hotel believed to be involved in the transportation of narcotics and guns. After several days of surveillance, these individuals were stopped on the New Jersey Turnpike by Squad members and were found to be in possession of a stolen handgun, marijuana valued at $100 and $1,726 in U.S. currency.

H093-96-03 - Hotel Squad members initiated an investigation with members of U.S. Customs of an individual who was found to have ingested 720 grams of heroin valued at $100,000. Hotel Squad members then facilitated a controlled delivery of the heroin to another individual who was arrested when he attempted to take possession of the heroin at a nearby hotel. This individual was arrested and $6,000 was seized.

H093-96-06 - Hotel Squad members initiated an investigation of several individuals who were acting suspiciously in a hotel parking lot. Subsequent investigation led to the discovery of eight illegal aliens in the suspect vehicle. Members of the Immigration and Naturalization Service were contacted and responded to the scene and placed the two individuals under arrest and detained the illegal aliens. It was later discovered that the two defendants were part of an illegal network involving the transportation of illegal aliens from Mexico to the New York/New Jersey area.

H093-96-07 - Hotel Squad members initiated an investigation of several individuals believed to be involved in a narcotic distribution network between North Carolina and New Jersey. Squad members conducted extensive surveillance of their activities over several days. Eventually, three individuals were arrested and found to be in possession of 2 kilos of crack cocaine valued at $55,000 in a hidden compartment in their vehicle. In addition, $835 in U. S. currency was seized.

H093-96-08 - Hotel Squad members initiated an investigation of an individual as the result of an anonymous phone call received at Division Headquarters indicating that an individual was en route to Columbus, Georgia on a Greyhound bus with crack cocaine in his possession. Squad members immediately contacted police in Georgia and an investigation was initiated. A short time later, this individual was apprehended and found to be in possession of 11 grams of crack cocaine valued at $1,320.00.

H093-96-09 - Hotel Squad members initiated an investigation of three individuals staying at a hotel who were believed to be involved in money laundering. After a short surveillance, these three individuals were arrested for possession of a cloned cellular telephone valued at $300. In addition, $3,000 in U. S. currency was seized.

Your outstanding arrest made on May 27, 1988 which resulted in the confiscation of 40 pounds of marijuana valued at $20,000 has been brought to my attention.

Indeed I was very pleased to learn of this fine display of police work and, accordingly, I wanted to commend you for your efforts. In my view, much of the reason the New Jersey State Police benefits from a reputation as one of the nation's finest law enforcement organizations is due to excellent performance of its individual officers each and every day. Your professionalism exemplified by this most recent arrest demonstrates your total dedication to duty.

I salute you and wish you continued success. Also, please be advised by copy of this letter I am requesting that Colonel Pagano make this a permanent part of your personnel record.

Dear Trooper [REDACTED]

Your outstanding arrest made on April 5, 1988 which resulted in the confiscation of $20,480 in U. S. currency has been brought to my attention.

Indeed I was very pleased to learn of this fine display of police work and, accordingly, I wanted to commend you for your efforts. In my view, much of the reason the New Jersey State Police benefits from a reputation as one of the nation's finest law enforcement organizations is due to excellent performance of its individual officers each and every day. Your professionalism exemplified by this most recent arrest demonstrates your total dedication to duty.

I salute you and wish you continued success. Also, please be advised by copy of this letter I am requesting that Colonel Pagano make this a permanent part of your personnel record.

Again, congratulations.

I am pleased to acknowledge your continuing excellent police work exemplified by your aggressive pursuit of law breakers. To be sure, this arrest displays a level of professionalism and dedication to duty for which your colleagues, and all New Jersey citizens, can be proud.

As you know, a copy of this letter will be made a part of your permanent record by Colonel Pagano.

Best wishes for continued success.

Sincerely,

Dear Trooper [REDACTED]

Your outstanding arrest made on March 2, 1988 which resulted in the confiscation of 18 ounces of cocaine valued at $36,000 and $2,991 in U. S. currency has been brought to my attention.

Indeed I was very pleased to learn of this fine display of police work and, accordingly, I wanted to commend you for your efforts. In my view, much of the reason the New Jersey State Police benefits from a reputation as one of the nation's finest law enforcement organizations is due to excellent performance of its individual officers each and every day. Your professionalism exemplified by this most recent arrest demonstrates your total dedication to duty.

I salute you and wish you continued success. Also, please be advised by copy of this letter I am requesting that Colonel Pagano make this a permanent part of your personnel record.

Your outstanding arrest made on March 21, 1988 which resulted in the confiscation of $15,871 in U.S. currency which reacted positively to a narcotics dog has been brought to my attention.

Indeed I was very pleased to learn of this fine display of police work and, accordingly, I wanted to commend you for your efforts. In my view, much of the reason the New Jersey State Police benefits from a reputation as one of the nation's finest law enforcement organizations is due to excellent performance of its individual officers each and every day. Your professionalism exemplified by this most recent arrest demonstrates your total dedication to duty.

I salute you and wish you continued success. Also, please be advised by copy of this letter I am requesting that Colonel Pagano make this a permanent part of your personnel record.

Your outstanding arrest made on January 17, 1988 which resulted in the confiscation of $19,900 in U.S. currency which reacted positively to a State Police narcotics dog has been brought to my attention.

Indeed I was very pleased to learn of this fine display of police work and, accordingly, I wanted to commend you for your efforts. In my view, much of the reason the New Jersey State Police benefits from a reputation as one of the nation's finest law enforcement organizations is due to excellent performance of its individual officers each and every day. Your professionalism exemplified by this most recent arrest demonstrates your total dedication to duty.

I salute you and wish you continued success. Also, please be advised by copy of this letter I am requesting that Colonel Pagano make this a permanent part of your personnel record.

Dear Trooper [REDACTED]

Your outstanding arrest made on February 2, 1988 which resulted in the confiscation of 1/2 ounce of cocaine valued at $1,000 and $9,920 in U. S. currency has been brought to my attention.

Indeed I was very pleased to learn of this fine display of police work and, accordingly, I wanted to commend you for your efforts. In my view, much of the reason the New Jersey State Police benefits from a reputation as one of the nation's finest law enforcement organizations is due to excellent performance of its individual officers each and every day. Your professionalism exemplified by this most recent arrest demonstrates your total dedication to duty.

I salute you and wish you continued success. Also, please be advised by copy of this letter I am requesting that Colonel Pagano make this a permanent part of your personnel record.

Again, congratulations.

Sincerely,

Dear Trooper [REDACTED]

Your outstanding arrest made on April 4, 1986 which resulted in the confiscation of 2.5 ounces of cocaine valued at $5,000 has been brought to my attention.

Indeed I was very pleased to learn of this fine display of police work and, accordingly, I wanted to commend you for your efforts. In my view, much of the reason the New Jersey State Police benefits from a reputation as one of the nation's finest law enforcement organizations is due to excellent performance of its individual officers each and every day. Your professionalism exemplified by this most recent arrest demonstrates your total dedication to duty.

I salute you and wish you continued success. Also, please be advised by copy of this letter I am requesting that Colonel Pagano make this a permanent part of your personnel record.

Again, congratulations.

Sincerely,

W. CARY EDWARDS

Dear Trooper [REDACTED]

I wish to offer my heartfelt congratulations on your outstanding arrest.

Your continued success in the field of law enforcement is certainly a source of pride to me, and I have no doubt, it also serves as an inspiration to your fellow officers. Few individuals in any field can claim such professional accomplishment.

When outstanding police work becomes, as in your case, a trademark, there is no question it is due to tireless dedication and a devotion to duty. The New Jersey State Police is indeed fortunate to have you among its elite corps of officers.

Please accept my congratulations again and please continue this outstanding work.

Be advised a copy of this letter is being sent to Colonel Pagano so that it can be placed in your personnel record.

Sincerely,
