Content Note

On 27 February 1911, a bill was proposed to repeal the charter of the Morris Canal and Banking Company and to dispose of its property. A commission, consisting of Governor Woodrow Wilson, Attorney General Edmund Wilson, and Judge Bennet Van Syckel, recommended the abandonment of the canal upon terms providing for the payment to the State of "only about seven hundred thousand dollars" by the Lehigh Valley Railroad Co. By Assembly Joint Resolution No. 11, passed 28 March 1912, it was resolved that a 12-member committee be appointed to report on the extent, condition and value of the property owned by the canal company, and to investigate whether the company had forfeited its charter by reason of failure to operate or maintain the canal. The committee was appointed in April and the twelve men, along with other members of the legislature, toured the canal by boat in July 1912. In 1914, the committee reported that the company had not forfeited its charter; however, they recommended that the canal be abandoned.

Records of the Investigation Committee of 1912-1913 include correspondence, maps, photographs, newspaper clippings, reports, and transcripts of the committee's proceedings. The files also contain several writings of Hudson Maxim, a local land owner who vigorously supported abandonment of the canal. The "Miscellaneous records" file contains legislation, correspondence, and reports, as well as documents relating to the case in chancery between the Morris Canal and Banking Company and the Central Railroad Company of New Jersey, 1863.
