

During a Disaster-CAT

Plan

Disasters can take many forms, from hurricanes, flooding, electrical storms, high winds, extreme heat/extreme cold, blizzards, tornadoes, wildfires, etc. It is important during this time that you follow the directions of emergency personnel whether to evacuate or shelter in place. Hopefully, you have done the needed preparation for your cat prior to an emergency.

If not already done and time permits, sign up to receive critical alerts by checking your town or county Office of Emergency Management.

Prepare

Be aware that the reactions of your pet during a disaster can change and will be based on fear and instinct. Cats can be especially frightened by loud noises, flashes of lightening, increasing water levels and falling/moving debris. This can lead to your cat running away and/or hiding in unusual places. If an emergency/disaster situation is imminent, gather your cat and place in a cat carrier. Remember to spend time with your pets during a disaster and soothe them.

Gather up your "Go Bag" "http://animalemergency.nj.gov/documents/Cat\_Go\_Bag.pdf" and related supplies and place them by the door.

During a disaster, storm conditions and updates are given by emergency personnel. You can listen to alerts regarding weather and disaster information, along with official instructions and announcements from emergency management by checking alerts on your TV or phone or use a battery powered radio if your electricity is off. Many county Offices of Emergency Management can send critical updates to your phone. To sign up for these updates from your local and county community, visit your town's website or county's Office of Emergency Management.
