

SADC Beginning Farmer Land Access Training

Upcoming Workshop — April 8, 2019: “Assessing Farmland”

Overview

The State Agriculture Development (SADC) will host the third workshop in their ongoing educational series conducted as part of the American Farmland Trust (AFT) “Farmland for the Next Generation” project, which seeks to provide beginning farmers with the skills and information they need to obtain suitable land. Through the AFT project, SADC staff have been trained as agricultural educators to help beginner farmers gain access to land.

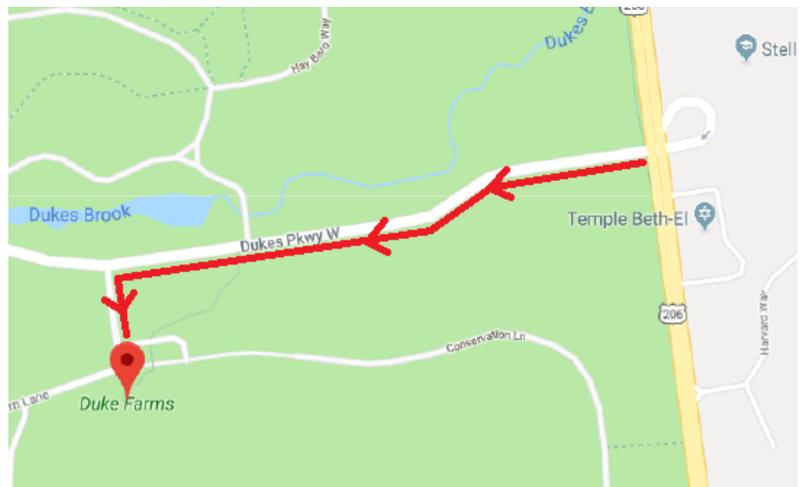

During the third workshop, “Assessing Farmland” attendees will learn the different elements to consider when assessing a potential piece of land inside and outside the classroom. Attendees will learn how to navigate various resources available online, and learn what types of characteristics to consider when conducting a land assessment.
