Benefits of Enhancing Relationship Skills

- Good interpersonal skills are a predictor of career success
- Effective communication strengthens relationships which leads to job satisfaction
- Crucial to good teamwork and customer service
- A critical factor in managing stress and staying healthy
Barriers to Effective Communication

- Prioritizing tasks, our own agenda, etc. instead of getting along well with people
- Interpersonal differences (cultural, personality, generational, etc.)
- Poorly managed emotions
- High stress levels
Proactively Build Connections

• Get to know people – ask about their needs, interests, etc.

• Practice caring – ask about people’s situations, opinions, feelings, etc.

• Spend more time face-to-face
Pick the Right Times to Interact

- Whenever possible, make sure you’re in a good place mentally & emotionally

- Be considerate of the other person’s schedule, workload, emotional state, etc.

- Ask “is this a good time to talk”, and be flexible if it’s not
Practice Good Listening Skills

• Be present – give the person you’re interacting with your full attention

• Hear them out – minimize interrupting the other person while they’re speaking

• Be respectful – listen non-judgmentally (creates safety)

• Show interest in what they’re talking about
Respond Instead of React

- Proactively manage your stress level (stressed out people tend to overreact)
- Stay aware of what you’re feeling (key to rationally responding vs. emotionally reacting)
- If possible, pause to gather yourself
- Think before you speak
Always Disagree Agreeably

• Seek a win–win outcome

• Speak with kindness & consideration (it’s not what you say, it’s how you say it)

• Always be respectful of the other’s opinion (even if you don’t agree)
