

The Hancock House was built in 1734 by William and Sarah Hancock. It is both an excellent example of English Quaker architecture and the site of an unfortunate massacre during the Revolutionary War.