Teacher Grant for Holocaust/Genocide Education

The Julius and Dorothy Koppelman Holocaust/Genocide Resource Center of the Center for Diversity and Inclusion at Rider University has announced the Joan Lavine Keats Social Justice Institute grant for teachers of the Holocaust and Genocide.

Joan Lavine Keats was one of the founding members of the Koppelman Center at Rider. An outstanding educator, she held a bedrock belief in the power of education to reinforce social values. The Institute established in her name seeks to support teachers who are committed to furthering social justice and understanding through their curriculum. To enable that goal, Keats Grants are awarded in amounts up to $400.

Who should apply: Kindergarten through twelfth grade teachers who are concerned with confronting prejudice and furthering social justice through the study of the Holocaust and other genocides are eligible for Keats Grant.

Key steps/actions

The grant application and description are available on the New Jersey Commission on Holocaust Education website at: <https://www.nj.gov/education/holocaust/awards/opportunities/>. DEADLINE JANUARY 27, 2023
