

TEACHER GRANTS: $400.00

The Joan Lavine Keats Social Justice Institute of
The Julius and Dorothy Koppelman Holocaust/Genocide
Resource Center at Rider University

Joan Lavine Keats was one of the founding members of the Koppelman Center. She was an outstanding educator who believed in the influence of education in inculcating social values. The Institute established in her name seeks to support teachers who are committed to furthering social justice in their teaching. Grants will be awarded up to $400.00.

Who should apply: Kindergarten through twelfth grade teachers who are concerned with confronting prejudice and furthering social justice through the study of the Holocaust or other genocides in their curriculum are eligible for teaching grants.

To apply: Teachers must submit a two to three page proposal describing how they include the topic of the Holocaust or other genocides in their classroom and how they would use the grant to assist their teaching. First preference will be given to proposals to acquire permanent materials (books, videos, displays, and other relevant permanent materials). Proposals for a speaker or a field trip (e.g., visit to Holocaust Museum) will be considered. Teachers MUST include a list of costs in their grant applications.

Deadline: The grant application form MUST be submitted to the Koppelman Center no later than Friday, October 27, 2017. Grant recipients will be notified by November 30, 2017.
