As a teacher I am used to seeing progress in small increments. As an environmentalist, I see time wasted over the years by patiently waiting for each small increment to build into a concern for more action as regards our planet. I want more! I want it for the children that have no voice in their future. We need stronger energy policies, as strong as we can make them and it has to be now. Young men and women have been sent to war over oil and wether or not that statement is true we need to look to alternative sources of energy such as wind power, solar, and capturing methane gases from our landfills. We know what carbon based technologies have done to our planet and if we are really committed to making this state a leader in the regreening of the planet we need a strong plan. More efficient vehicles, public transportation, banning leaf blowers, grants for solar energy, and conservation are all within our grasp if we have a government that can lead us. We have to count on you, we have seen what Bush has done.

Respectfully,
