Subject: [EXTERNAL] 2019 Draft Energy Master Plan
Date: Friday, September 13, 2019 10:06:32 PM

The plan recognizes the importance of climate action, so I don't need to emphasize its basic importance. The question is only: Is it enough? The answer is unfortunately No. I am a scientist myself (Professor at CUNY) and I have looked into the details of the matter. The plan should be 100% renewable energy by 2050, and there should be a timetable to achieve it (otherwise, we all know, nothing happens until 2049, when it will be much too late). The organization "Empower NJ" has detailed suggestions about what the actions should be and why. They sound difficult to achieve, but they are really necessary: If we don't move nobody moves, and enormous tragedies will happen.
