On this page, information will be posted about the American Community Survey and decennial Census data, including Census 2010 data, as it is released.

Try DVRPC's new Census Data Profile Web Map. This application allows users to quickly access Census Data Profiles. Currently, there are links to the new municipal ACS profiles. In the future, links to additional Census data products will be added.

American Community Survey (ACS)

The American Community Survey (ACS) is a nationwide survey conducted by the U.S. Census Bureau designed to provide communities a fresh look at how they are changing. The ACS collects information such as age, race, income, commute time to work, home value, veteran status, and other important data. The data profiles accessible through this page provide demographic information (race, ethnicity, and total housing units) as well as social characteristics (relationships, languages spoken at home, and marital, educational, and disability status); economics (income, employment, occupation, and commute to work); and housing characteristics (occupancy, tenure, year built, and housing value and cost). This information is based on a sample collected over the most recent five years and is not based on the 2010 decennial Census. For additional information on the U.S. Census Bureau's American Community visit www.census.gov/acs/www/.

View 2010 Census Data

The United States Constitution requires that a national census be taken once every ten years to count every person living in the country, including both citizens and non-citizens of all races and ethnic groups. Accurate data reflecting changes in every community is critical for deciding how many seats each state will have in the U.S. House of Representatives. Census data is also used in deciding how federal and state funds are distributed, including more than $400 billion per year in federal funds for projects like hospitals, schools, senior citizen centers, and job training facilities.
