Jersey Aviators show their mettle in Iraq

By Sgt. Wayne Woolley, DMAVA Public Affairs Specialist

The hoopla of their War Memorial homecoming over, the Soldiers of the 1st Battalion of the 1-150th Assault Helicopter Battalion and Detachment I, Bravo Company, 628th Aviation Support Battalion, are settling back into life in New Jersey and shaking away those last bits of Iraqi dust.

The staff of DMAVA Highlights caught up to the two commanders, Col. John W. Scannell and Capt. John Pellington, last week as their troops unit went through demobilization at Fort Dix.

Scannell said the assault helicopter battalion overcame big hurdles to be ready for the Iraq deployment. Although the unit deployed to Iraq in 2005, attrition had left it with a severe shortage of pilots in command, air mission commanders and door gunners. At one point early in pre-mobilization, trainers gave the unit's leaders this blunt assessment: "You guys will never be ready."

"I knew on paper, they were correct, we had a lot of holes," Scannell recalled.

He knew something else: "We had the kind of people who would develop a plan then make it happen." He was right. The unit finished its Iraq deployment with kudos spanning the various chains of command and from all components and branches.

In the end, the Jersey aviators were able to transport more than 11,000 Soldiers and Marines and give them a break from navigating Iraq's dangerous roads.

The unit had a 96 percent mission launch rate, a major accomplishment in a place that's synonymous with sandy grit.

Scannell said he was most proud that the battalion, which numbered about 250 troops, helped other units that came through its base near Al Kut, about 80 miles southeast of Baghdad. The battalion helped other units track down their mail, fix their equipment and use their medical clinic.

"We took in a lot of stray cats," Scannell said. "Anybody who came to our door, we helped out."

The 31-Soldier aviation support detachment also enjoyed plenty of success, according to Pellington.

That unit overcame inexperience among its ranks and went on to perform several maintenance feats no one in Army aviation had seen in Iraq in a long time.

The unit completed full salvage operations on three downed aircraft – the first in Iraq since 2004. The full salvage operation meant collecting the wrecked helicopters from the desert floor – and then transporting the birds to a depot and then orchestrating a complete mechanical overhaul. All three of the aircraft – UH-60 Blackhawks – flew again. Two of the Blackhawks, which had collided, needed the entire rear portion rebuilt, a feat the Jersey troops performed in less than two months.

"They did some pretty amazing work under some real tough conditions," Pellington said.

Menlo Park staff spreads cheer

From the desk of Joseph Brandspiegel, CEO of the Menlo Park Memorial Home

Once again, the spirit of giving was alive and well at the Menlo Park Memorial Home over the Holiday Season. The staff and residents collected and contributed a large number of toys to the National Guard Family Programs staff. In addition, the president and vice president of the home's Resident Council visited the East Jersey State Prison in Rahway to discuss long-term care activities at the home. Finally, the staff worked hard to distribute gifts to the residents, ranging from electric shavers, watches, warm blankets to cardigans emblazoned with the Menlo logo. Our recreation Therapy Department in coordination with our own volunteers from the DAR have been worked long hours to identify each gift with the resident's name and package all gifts for proper distribution.

DMAVA Green

By Tech. Sgt. Barb Harbison, DMAVA Public Affairs Specialist

Did your resolutions for 2010 include exercise? When you pulled that old exercise/yoga mat out of the closet, did replacement cross your mind? Don't throw it in the trash, recycle it when you buy a new mat.

Visit these two Web sites to find information about where to drop your old mat so it can be made into new mats or sent to a yoga center where students in need can use it. Try www.recycleyourmat.com or <http://www.jadeyoga.com/store/pages.php?pageid=5>.

They ask that you clean your mat before you drop it off. Here are directions from Recycle Your Mat. If your mat is lightly soiled, use a spray bottle, damp sponge, or terry cloth rag to apply a solution of two cups of water and four drops of dish soap. Rub the soiled areas. Wipe the mat with clean water; then rub with a dry terry cloth towel. Hang to air dry.

If your mat is heavily soiled, submerge it in a solution of warm water and mild detergent; use very little soap as any residue may cause the mat to become slippery during future use. Thoroughly hand wash the mat and rinse in clean water. After squeezing out the excess water, lay the mat on a dry towel and roll the mat and towel together. Stepping on the rolled up mat will squeeze more moisture out of the mat and into the towel. Then unroll and hang to air dry.

Visit <http://life.gaiam.com/gaiam/p/50WaystoReuseYourYogaFitnessMatBestidea.html> or <http://dailycupofyoga.wordpress.com/2009/11/07/43-creative-ways-to-reuse-or-recycle-your-old-yoga-mat/> for suggestions on ways to reuse your yoga mat. There are a number of interesting ideas to make use of your mat and keep it out of the landfill.

So don't feel guilty when you buy a new mat, just make sure you recycle or reuse the old one.

Keep Green!

Army needs scientific minds For eCybermission judging

The Army is looking for volunteers with a background or interest in science, technology, engineering, math or education to virtually judge a nationwide competition open to students in the sixth through ninth grades. Now in its eighth year, eCYBERMISSION is a free, web-based, science, technology, engineering and math (STEM) competition that allows students to work together to solve a problem in their community while using the scientific method. Virtual Judges are responsible for scoring student project submissions, known as Mission Folders, on the eCYBERMISSION web site. Virtual Judge registration is open through Friday, Feb 26, 2010, at www.ecybermission.com. Michael Lombardi, Research, Development and Engineering Command Program Manager for eCYBERMISSION, urges Americans to serve their country by registering to volunteer. "America's future competitiveness and national security rests partly on our leadership in STEM education. Virtual Judges are in a position to promote these important skills among our next generation of leaders."

Virtual Judges are of vital importance to the success of eCYBERMISSION, and choose to volunteer because they:

- Believe promoting STEM education to America's youth is important to our nation's continued global competitiveness;
- Enjoy supporting and volunteering for an education-related community service activity;
- Want to contribute their expertise in a fun and unique way to the next generation of America's leaders;
- Are interested in discovering how today's students learn and apply math, science and technology in a school setting; and
- Enjoy the flexibility of volunteering online at their convenience during the Regional and Alternate Judging periods, from March 1 through March 29, 2010..

Virtual Judges get to experience firsthand the scientific talent and passion of students nationwide. eCYBERMISSION gives students from all backgrounds a chance to compete and win up to $8,000 in U.S. EE Savings Bonds, and Virtual Judges have the opportunity to determine the winners based on their Mission Folder submissions. Since the competition's inception in 2002, the U.S. Army has awarded more than $6.7 million in prize money, and over 58,000 students have participated.

Prospective Virtual Judges can learn more and register to volunteer at www.ecybermission.com More information is also available by calling 1-866-GO-CYBER (462-9237) or by e-mailing volunteerprogram@ecybermission.com.
