Guard helps clean beach at Sea Girt

Pvt. Jan Hanna Huelgas joined the Army National Guard to protect her state and nation. She never expected to spruce up her favorite vacation destination.

The Soldier from Passaic was among 22 Recruit Sustainment Program members who spent Oct. 23 cleaning the beach at Sea Girt as part of a widespread effort to clean up the coastal waters of the Garden State.

"New Jersey is known for the shore. To keep it clean, and keep the community clean – with so many people coming here from other states – it makes us look good," Huelgas said as she sifted through the sand.

She had plenty of company. In all, more than 75 other volunteers including the Boy Scouts and members of community and environmental groups pitched in to help clean up the beach in Sea Girt.

In all, the volunteers collected more than 100 pounds of trash and recyclables – enough to fill 60 trash bags.

The beach sweep was one of dozens held up and down the Jersey Shore by the environmental group Clean Ocean Action (COA), a nonprofit organization that has conducted beach clean ups for a quarter century.

The recruits were there as part of Guard the Environment; a grass roots movement within the recruiting and retention community. Guard the Environment is a chance to showcase National Guard members participating in environmentally friendly activities and giving back to their local communities.

"The National Guard presence was most appreciated. What a great way to connect with the local community," said Tammy Schwier, a local realtor and beach sweep captain for COA.

Pfc. Dylan Averack, a recruit from West Windsor said he was proud to be a part of the beach sweep.

Staff Sgt. Peter Sarni oversees RSP recruits as they sweep Sea Girt beach for trash and recyclables during a beach sweep Oct 23rd. Photo by Sgt. William Addison, 444th MPAD.

"It's great, we're cleaning up a beach that needs to be cleaned and we're helping out the local people," he said. "When I come out here fishing I'll see a clean beach and know that I was a part of that," he said.

DMAVA Green

By Tech. Sgt. Barb Harbison, DMAVA Public Affairs Specialist

Halloween is right around the corner – are you prepared? Do you have the family's costumes all ready to go? Makeup prepped? Candy bought? If not, here are some green suggestions that may help you make your Halloween green.

First move is the costume. Buying one from the store can be so expensive and many people don't have the ability to whip one up on the sewing machine. But with some plastic bags, tape, and some other items, you can create a mermaid costume (see <http://www.instructables.com/id/Make-a-mermaid-costume-from-old-junk/>) or add in a broken black umbrella and make a Batman costume (see <http://www.evilmadscientist.com/article.php/Umbrella-BatCostume>).

Vampires are the rage this year making fangs and blood a must for the costume. You can usually find the black clothes in your closet, and with a empty white plastic dishwashing bottle, you can make your own fangs. See http://www.ehow.com/how_2081872_make-vampire-fangs.html for the directions. With a few ingredients like water, corn syrup, red food coloring and the recipe found at this Web site - http://www.wikihow.com/Make-Fake-Blood#Non-Toxic_Blood – you can be dripping blood from your new fangs.

Is your kid looking for a costume that is different from everyone else? Go to <http://www.parents.com/holiday/halloween/costumes/diy-costume-ideas/> to find details on making a scuba diver costume.

For more ideas, check out <http://www.instructables.com/halloween/>

Next year organize a neighborhood costume swap well before the holiday. Gather the local families and have them bring the outgrown or no longer wanted costumes or parts of costumes to a pre-Halloween get-together. And when the holiday is over, you can probably find a school, shelter or center that could use your cowboy hat, vampire cape or pirate costume.

Instead of buying another fancy bag for the kids to gather their loot – have them use a reusable grocery bag, an old pillowcase, an big old purse or briefcase, or those plastic shopping bags that reproduce under the kitchen sink.

While it is estimated that we spend $40 per person on Halloween candy, decorations and greeting cards – you can save money by creating your own decorations, and give the kids something to do when they claim they have nothing to do. Drop by <http://www.allfreecrafts.com/halloween/lightbulb-witch.shtml> for a crafty light bulb witch or <http://www.allfreecrafts.com/halloween/egg-carton-pumpkins.shtml> for pumpkins made from egg cartons.

When you are making the jack-o-lantern for the front porch, save the seeds. You can throw them in your compost pile or toast them for a healthy snack.

LED or solar powered lights on your walkway are the green way to light the way for trick or treaters.

Enjoy your Halloween and Keep Green!

The Grand Prize is a $5,000 trip to the Shades of Green on Walt Disney World Resort. Plus, one lucky winner at each garrison will win a $200 prepaid gift card!

Holiday mailing dates given for overseas packages, cards

By Karen Jowers, Air Force Times

For those mailing packages to friends and loved ones in the military overseas, Christmas comes early. And Hanukkah comes even earlier.

It depends on how you plan to send it, but if it's traveling the slowest way — parcel post — mail that package by Nov. 12 to get it there by Dec. 25, according to recommended holiday shipping dates provided by the Military Postal Service Agency.

Here are the other recommended mail deadlines. Subtract 24 days from each deadline to get it there in time for Hanukkah:

- Space Available Mail (SAM): Nov. 20 to contingency locations (APO/FPO/DPO AE Zip 093); all other overseas military locations by Nov. 26.
- Parcel Airlift Mail (PAL): Dec. 1 to contingency locations; all others by Dec. 3.
- Priority Mail: Dec. 4 to contingency locations; all others by Dec. 10.
- First-class cards and letters: Dec. 4 to contingency locations; all others by Dec. 10
- Express Mail Military Services: Not available to contingency locations; other locations by Dec. 18. Check with your local post office to determine if this service is available to a particular APO/FPO/DPO address.

The indoor attractions include: go-karts, bumper cars, junior bumper cars, Lazer Runner, 4D theater and arcade games. For more information on their games and pricing, visit their Web site - www.thefunplex.com.

Family care plan change addresses custody questions

By Karen Parrish, American Forces Press Service

WASHINGTON, Oct. 19, 2010 – A recent change in Defense Department policy highlights why servicemembers and deployable civilians who also are custodial parents may want to seek legal help in arranging their children's care during deployment.

DOD Instruction 1342.19, "Family Care Plans," was revised in May to require such plans from troops and expeditionary civilians who have legal custody or joint custody of a minor child. The new policy requires these parents to attempt to obtain the consent of the noncustodial or adoptive parent to any family care plan that would leave the child in the custody of a third party.

Army Col. Shawn Shumake, director of the Pentagon's office of legal policy, said many servicemembers may believe mistakenly that their family care plans allow them to transfer temporary custody to a child's stepparent or grandparent during a deployment. But when another biological parent is in the picture, state courts have unanimously ruled that a parent's custodial rights take precedence.

"If you see that there's going to be a conflict [over custody], then you need to go into court before you deploy, and get the court to resolve any issues," Shumake said.

While developing a family care plan, filers identify short- and long-term care providers, supply documentation of financial arrangements ensuring the self-sufficiency of family members, complete transportation arrangements and designate escorts for family members, and otherwise prove their families' needs will be met during their absence.

Each military branch has its own regulation covering family care plans, and the services are revising those regulations to comply with the DOD instruction, Shumake said.

The instruction, originally published in 1992, initially applied only to single-parent servicemembers. Beginning in 2008, dual-military couples with children were required to file such a plan. The policy now applies to:

- Servicemembers and civilian expeditionary work force members who have legal custody or joint custody of a minor child;
- Single parents;
- Dual-service couples with dependent family members under the age of 19; and
- Servicemembers and expeditionary civilians legally responsible for others of any age who are unable to care for themselves in their absence.

Veterans & Military

Program links Reservists, Guardsmen, families to jobs

By Donna Miles, American Forces Press Service

A program that links reserve and National Guard members, their families and veterans with civilian employers has reached a milestone, with more than 1,000 employers now signed on to hire qualified job-seekers.

The Employer Partnership of the Armed Forces, originally an Army Reserve initiative that has expanded militarywide, is growing by leaps and bounds as it helps both the military and civilian employers tap into the same talent pool, reported Lt. Gen. Jack C. Stultz, chief of the Army Reserve, who founded the program.

In one of the more promising new developments, the Army Reserve, which still manages the program, is working with the Ford Motor Co. and Chrysler Corp. to provide hybrid vehicle certification training and jobs to military mechanics, Stultz said.

"They are going to provide the hybrid training to our mechanics, because the Army doesn't have that training," he said. "So they will provide that training at their expense."

In another innovative arrangement in the works, GE Healthcare, which manufactures MRI equipment and CT scanners, plans to hire military biomedical equipment specialists to maintain it, the general said.

Stultz said he has met twice with GE Healthcare corporate officer Mark Vachon to discuss the concept.

"I can recruit kids or take current soldiers I've got who want to get into that field," he said. "Mike will take them and train them at his facility in Milwaukee and certify them."

From there, he added, the trainee will move into one of about 300 high-demand jobs GE Healthcare opens each year around the country.

Stultz calls the partnership initiative a win-win situation for everyone involved. Reserve-component members get a leg up in a competitive job market. Employers who understand their military obligations guarantee interviews for qualified applicants, as well as priority placement for openings. In return, employers get to capitalize on the participants' military training, while getting a quality worker many say is increasingly difficult to come by.

Vachon at GE Healthcare told Stultz he's impressed with the quality and integrity of employees he gets through the program.

"I can take a soldier and I can trust that if that soldier goes to a hospital to take care of equipment, he is going to do his job," Stultz said, quoting Vachon. "He understands what 'mission first' is all about."

VA streamlining forms for disability benefits, major reform

The U.S. Department of Veterans Affairs has released three new disability benefits questionnaires for physicians of Veterans applying for VA disability compensation benefits. This initiative marks the beginning of a major reform of the physicians' guides and automated routines that will streamline the claims process for injured or ill Veterans.

These new questionnaires are the first of 79 disability benefits questionnaires that will guide Veterans' personal physicians, as well as VA physicians, in the evaluation of the most frequent medical conditions affecting Veterans.

Accurate and timely medical evaluations are a critical element of VA's continued commitment to high-quality and prompt decisions about the nature and degree of conditions afflicting Veterans. Streamlining this process by directly involving Veterans' treating physicians in providing specific information needed to evaluate their claims will lead to completeness in the examination and faster compensation decisions.

VA's goal is to process all claims in fewer than 125 days with a decision quality rate no lower than 98 percent, a mark Secretary Shinseki has mandated by 2015. The physician questionnaire project is one of more than three dozen initiatives actively underway at VA, including a major technology modernization that will lead to paperless claims processing.

The disability benefits questionnaires are part of VA's automated health records system which prompts VA physicians conducting disability examinations to include precise information in a standardized way to assist claims adjudicators in ensuring Veterans receive the benefits they deserve as quickly as possible.

These VA examination results are electronically available to claims adjudicators in VA regional offices.

For Veterans who receive their care from private physicians, VA has placed the disability benefits questionnaires on its Internet site (<http://www.vba.va.gov/disabilityexams>) with instructions for physicians to submit examination results on Veterans' behalf.

The first three questionnaires cover B-cell leukemia (such as hairy-cell leukemia), Parkinson's disease and ischemic heart disease.

For additional information on the VA disability compensation program or additional presumptive disabilities for Veterans exposed to herbicide agents, contact VA at 800-827-1000 or visit <http://www.vba.va.gov/bln/21/AO/claimherbicide.htm>.
