Operation Military Kids (OMK) meets this weekend.

What is OMK? OMK is a collaborative outreach initiative to provide support and assistance to geographically dispersed military youth and their families. OMK has partnerships with the USDA, Child and Youth Services, National 4-H program. Boys and Girls Clubs of America and American Legions.

Creates community support network for military youth "in our own backyard" when Soldier parents are deployed.

Delivers recreation, social, educational programs for military youth living in civilian communities.

Supports military kids coping with the stress of knowing their deployed parents may be in harm's way.

Collaborates with schools to ensure that staff is attuned to the unique needs of military students.

Educates the public on the impact of the deployment cycle on Soldiers, families, kids, and the community.

OMK includes Speak Out for Military Kids (SOMK), a state-wide initiative to educate citizens about the impact of deployments on all members of the community. The OMK initiative has also developed Hero Packs, which are backpacks that are given to deployed service members' children. The backpacks recognize the strengths of military-connected children and thank the youth for their sacrifices they make when their loved ones are deployed.

OMK members will be meeting on Saturday, February 25, 2006, from 10-3 p.m. in Westhampton, Burlington County. To register for this event, please check out the website at www.njomk.org.

This program is opened to ANYONE interested – ages 0-99. For more information, please contact the NJNG Youth Coordinator Amanda Balas at 609-562-0742 or amandabalas@hotmail.com.

25 March, 1:00pm

"Screaming Eagles in Vietnam: The 101st Airborne Division during the War" -- an oral history discussion and slide presentation by NJ Vietnam Veteran Peter Engelhardt.

Peter Engelhardt, of Summit, served in Vietnam from October 1968 through August 1969 with the 101st Airborne Division's 2nd Brigade, which operated out of Landing Zone (LZ) "Sally," near the ancient imperial city of Hue, and Fire Support Base (FSB) "Whip" in the Ashau Valley near the Laotian border in northern South Vietnam. Engelhardt was a college graduate who then attended Army Officer Candidate School at Fort Benning, Georgia. As an officer in Vietnam, he worked primarily behind the scenes dealing with operations planning and coordination, intelligence assessment, and psychological warfare exercises. He holds a deep admiration and respect for the airborne infantry "line" officers and their men, whose primary duty was combat. It is in their honor that he retells the story of his group of "Screaming Eagles," the nickname for members of the U.S. Army's 101st Airborne Division.

Fitness Corner - Ernest Razzano, Certified Fitness Trainer, ISSA

When do you train?

The biggest advantage of training first thing in the morning is that you free up the rest of your day, allowing you to focus on work and enjoy your evening activities. More often than not, waiting until later in the day drops the priority level of training below other matters like kids and work.

Training in the morning will help "jump-start" your metabolism and keep it elevated for up to 24 hours, thus burning more calories throughout the day. However, don't expect miracles. Training in the morning alone won't make you fit overnight. You'll need to carry out a good training routine, maintain a healthy, low-fat diet, and acquire good sleeping habits.

In addition, we all have certain schedules and personal preferences that dictate how we function on a day to day basis which is based on circadian rhythms: the daily cycles that our bodies follow. If you are a regular exerciser, you may have already determined your most productive time to exercise and follow a routine that works best for you. The bottom line is exercise at any time is better than no exercise at all. If you feel good beginning your day with exercise, then continue to do so. Studies have shown that people who exercise in the morning are more successful at making it a habit. If your schedule favors an early workout, emphasize stretching and a good warm-up to insure that your body is ready for action.

Now for your more technically adept people. During exercise sessions lasting longer than thirty minutes, there is a gradual shift from carbohydrate metabolism to fat metabolism. The process called lipolysis regulates fat metabolism. Our bodies store fat at adipocytes in the body in the form of triglycerides. Our bodies cannot use stored body fat for energy. These triglycerides must be broken down into one glycerol molecule and three free fatty acid molecules. It is the free fatty acids, which are metabolized via the Krebs cycle. This conversion cannot take place without the enzymes called lipases. At the onset of exercise the body releases the hormones epinephrine, norepinephrine, and glucagon, which stimulate the activity of the enzyme lipases. Lipolysis is a slow process and an increase of fat metabolism occurs after several minutes of exercise, usually 20-30 minutes.

On the flip side, you may want to consider the following as well. A study carried out at Kansas State University (Wilcox, Harford Wedel Medicine & Science in Sports and Exercise, 17:2, 1985), indicates that a kilogram of fat will be oxidized sooner when exercising in the fasted condition in the morning than when doing the same exercise in the afternoon. By measuring respiratory gas exchange, caloric expenditure, and carbohydrate and fatty acid metabolism, these researchers showed that the mass of fat burned during aerobic exercise amounts to 67% of the total energy expenditure achieved when the same exercise is done later in the day or in the fed state.
