YMCA offers Respite Child Care to deployed Reserve families

By Samantha L. Quigley, American Forces Press Service

WASHINGTON - It's a few hours a month, but the break the Armed Services YMCA Respite Child Care program provides parents with a deployed spouse always is welcome. And since the program's Oct. 1 nationwide expansion, many more parents will benefit.

The Armed Services YMCA, as part of a Defense Department contract, provides health and wellness opportunities, including the Respite Child Care program, for reserve-component servicemembers and their families across the country through their local YMCAs.

This means deploying Guardsmen and reservists and their families are eligible for a full YMCA membership for three months before deployment, the 12 months of deployment, and three months after, said Mike Landers, deputy national director of the Armed Services YMCA.

"This entire health and wellness contract was designed for them because they don't have the infrastructure that the active-duty families that live near major military installations have," Landers said. "So the YMCAs, the Pentagon thought, would be a great place for them to be able to connect with other Guard and reserve families who have their same circumstance."

The Respite Child Care program, part of that contract, provides up to 16 hours of child care for families of deployed Guard and reserve personnel. It's meant to be a "short break" for the

Federal Trade Commission offers gift card buying tips at holiday season

By Navy Lt. Jennifer Cragg, Special to American Forces Press Service

WASHINGTON - Because distance often separates extended and even immediate families in military life, gift cards are a popular choice for holiday gift-giving. After all, one size fits all, and the recipients can get exactly what they want from a retailer or restaurant.

But the Federal Trade Commission advises servicemembers and their families, as well as Defense Department civilians and contractors to think before they buy holiday gift cards this season, and buy from sources they know and trust.

"Avoid buying gift cards from online auction sites, because the cards may be counterfeit or may have been obtained fraudulently," said Carol A. Kando-Pineda, counsel for the commission's consumer and business education commission. So before you shell out your hard-earned money, you should know a few things first.

"Read the fine print before you buy," she said. "If you don't like the terms and conditions, buy elsewhere. Ask about expiration dates and fees when you're buying a card."

This type of information will always appear on the card itself, on the accompanying sleeve or envelope, or on the issuer's Web site. "If you don't see it, ask," Kando-Pineda cautioned. "If the information is separate from the gift card, give it to the recipient with the card to help protect the value of the card."

And buyers may not be aware, she added, that merchants often tack fees on to the gift cards -- for activation, maintenance or transactions, for example -- that may be deducted from the card's value at the recipient's end.

Kando-Pineda also recommends that recipients of gift cards shouldn't wait to use them. "Use your card as soon as you can," she said. "It's not unusual to misplace gift cards or forget you have them. Using them early will help you get the full value."

She noted that if a card does expire, the recipient should contact the issuer. "They may still honor the card," she said, "although they may charge a fee to do that."

Anyone who has a problem with use of a gift card should contact the company that issued it as soon as possible, Kando-Pineda said. If you can't resolve the problem at that level, she added, file a complaint with the appropriate authorities. If that doesn't fix the problem, she said, contact the Federal Trade Commission through its Web site or by calling 1-877-FTC-HELP (1-877-382-4357) toll-free. Complaints also may be filed with your state's attorney general.

Morris County Commerce Chamber initiates "Operation Appreciation"

Morris County Chamber of Commerce in partnership with Brighton Cromwell and the United Way of Morris County/Front Line Fund announce "Operation Appreciation."

This program will send hundreds of care packages to the U.S. troops deployed overseas. The Chamber is seeking donations of items to include in the packages which will be assembled on Dec. 11 and shipped with a personal message to individual military members whose names have been provided to the group.

Call Michele Farah at 973-539-3882, ext. 231 to arrange donation drop off or to volunteer to pack boxes.

Items needed include: scarves and gloves, toothpaste, sealed lip balm, roll-on deodorant, travel size foot powder and moist towelettes, single serve packets/boxes of hot or cold cereal, individually wrapped beef jerky, energy bars, gum, candy and more.

Respite Care

parent or guardian responsible the child's care, Landers said, and not a substitute for full-time or daily care.

"The respite care was designed to be an opportunity for the mom, whose husband is deployed, or the [dad] whose wife is deployed, to be able to drop their kids off to just have a little peace and quiet, to go to the commissary, to go shopping, to do whatever they need to do," Landers said.

During the first year, however, only the families in 10 pilot states were able to take advantage of the program, which must be offered through state licensed and certified programs and is free to parents. More than 220 children were served. Since Oct. 1, when the program expanded to all 50 states, another 200 children have taken advantage of the program.

"We saw a pretty significant uptick in the demand during the month of October," he said. "There are hundreds and hundreds of YMCAs that are now signed up to do this. I think we'll see a big uptick for the remainder of the year."

Armed Services YMCA officials said they would like to see those using the program establish a monthly routine. This, they explained, makes it easier for the participating YMCAs, since most don't have much excess capacity in their child care programs.

Say "Thanks" to the troops

If you go to this web site, <http://www.letsaythanks.com>, you can pick out a thank you card and Xerox will print it and it will be sent to a soldier that is currently serving in Iraq. You can't pick out who gets it, but it will go to a member of the armed services.

DMAVA Green

By Tech. Sgt. Barb Harbison, Public Affairs Specialist

The holidays are here and many of us decorate our homes, office areas, and places of worship to show our spirit. Rather than going out to purchase more and more items that will end up in the landfill, why not find ways to decorate cheaper and greener?

According to Earth911.com, "The gift wrap industry is a big business – consumers spend almost $2.6 billion annually on the paper, bags and trinkets that adorn our presents. According to Eco-Chick.com, if every American family wrapped just three presents in reused materials, it would save enough paper to cover 45,000 football fields."

Old cards: cut to use as gift tags; use doublestick tape and glue to the front of plain gift bags from the craft store; attach to a small piece of folded cardstock for a place card.

Wrapping paper: Iron gently with a warm iron to use again; use things like newspaper or old maps; color or stamp brown paper grocery bags.

Green your dinner table by using cloth napkins, tablecloths and placemats instead of paper. Throw them in the wash and reuse them repeatedly over the season and year after year. Purchase complimentary colors and patterns so you can mix and match your table settings so each party looks different.

A few easy decorations: hang cookie cutters from pretty ribbons; string popcorn with occasional whole cranberries for color on fishing line (after the holidays you can hang it outside for a feast for your feathered friends); bowls of nuts or fruit on the table for a centerpiece – pretty for now, snacks for later; bring in branches of evergreen, berries, acorns, pinecones, dried flowers, moss and bark to decorate the table or mantle, accentuate it with ribbons, crystals, small mirrors, stones, candles and other things that you find around the house.

Truly the season for keeping green!

National Guard asked to spread the VA “word”

By Army Sgt. 1st Class Michael J. Carden, American Forces Press Service

WASHINGTON - The National Guard can play an important role in helping to spread the news about the Veterans Affairs Department's new programs to veterans in their communities, VA Secretary Eric K. Shinseki told a National Guard conference just outside the nation's capital today.

Despite a long list of successful new programs this year, only about one-third of the nation's veterans have taken advantage of the services, Shinseki told more than 2,400 participants in the National Guard's first Joint Senior Leadership Conference at the National Harbor.

“We want them to know that VA is here,” Shinseki said. “If you have the opportunity to talk about what VA offers, I appreciate some help here, and if you need help getting a VA representative to speak with veterans in your communities, call and we'll provide someone to do that. But I do need your help.”

Shinseki highlighted some of VA's efforts this year to enhance education benefits through the Post 9/11 GI Bill and the department's efforts to end homelessness among veterans and to reduce veteran unemployment. VA has the nation's largest integrated medical system, with 153 health care centers with affiliations with 102 university medical schools, the secretary said. VA's electronic health care records also are networked with nearly 800 community-based outpatient clinics in the United States, and VA operates 232 veteran centers, including mobile clinics, to reach veterans in rural areas, he added.

Nearly 300,000 civil servants manage VA's health, benefits and national cemetery administrations to provide care and services for those who've served, Shinseki told the group.

In addition, he said, VA is the eighth-largest life insurance enterprise, with more than $1 trillion in coverage to more than 7 million clients. In education, VA is behind only the Department of Education in education benefits provided to Americans, with an annual payout of $9 billion a year. Also, VA guarantees about 1.3 million home loans with a balance of $175 billion.

But of the 23 million veterans in the United States, Shinseki said, fewer than 8 million are enrolled in VA programs. “In purely business terms, that would describe a 30 percent market penetration,” Shinseki said. “Veterans are our clients, so caring for veterans and providing them the services and benefits they have earned is VA's sole reason for existing, yet 70 percent of our market chooses to go elsewhere for support, or they do without.”

With support from the National Guard, Shinseki said, he is certain more veterans can learn about what VA has to offer. It's the business of VA to make sure veterans get the benefits and services they've earned, he said. “It's our intent to go after that 15 million part of the population that are not enrolled with us,” he said.

VA contacting recently retired, discharged military members

The Department of Defense notifies VA when service members are released from active duty. VA then sends a letter with information about VA benefits and assistance to aid the former service members' transition to civilian life. You can find additional information to help with personal and family concerns, and community readjustment issues here. Visit <http://www.vba.va.gov/VBA/>.

There are also toll-free numbers, VA Web sites, and brochures to help you get the information you need.

VA launches new Web site

VA recently launched a big website renovation project that will better serve our nation's veterans. The conversion began on Nov. 8, and was completed by Veterans Day, Nov. 11. VA asks visitors to the website to understand that as the new design is implemented across more than 500 VA websites there may be minor errors on some of the 80,000 pages. VA will monitor its web pages after the conversion and make appropriate corrections. Check out www.va.gov.
