Program Summary

This seminar will offer a review of laws and evidence rules that come into play in "Internet Crimes against Children" ("ICAC") cases. Generally speaking, ICAC cases include child pornography offenses and Internet child predator offenses. This seminar will explain the NCMEC CyberTip process that begins many ICAC cases. In child pornography offenses, particular attention will be paid to AOL distribution and peer-to-peer file-sharing cases. In child predator offenses, particular attention will be paid to so-called "traveler" cases and online exhibitionist cases. In addition, we will look at a disturbing new type of ICAC case in which the perpetrator gets the child victim to send him a "sexting" image, often by pretending to be a teenager, and then extorts more images by threatening to post the image on Facebook or to report the child's behavior to their parents. Participants will leave the seminar armed with a better understanding of how to handle any type of ICAC case.

Who Should Attend?

While this program is intended for attorneys who handle these types of matters, others, however, may find it of interest.

Who Is the Faculty?

Deputy Attorney General Kenneth R. Sharpe, counsel to the New Jersey ICAC, has been working ICAC cases for over nine years. DAG Sharpe graduated from Washington University in St. Louis

Law School. He began his career in McLean County, Illinois prosecuting misdemeanors before transferring to the Middlesex County Prosecutor's Office where he prosecuted indictable offenses in all phases for 12 years. While working in Middlesex County, he studied computer science at Rutgers University at night, graduating with a BA in 1996. Since 2002, he has been a Deputy Attorney General assigned to the Computer Analysis and Technology Unit at the New Jersey Division of Criminal Justice, handling ICAC cases as well as Cyber Crime cases.
