Program Summary

This presentation will provide students with a general overview of municipal bonds from what they are, what entities can issue them, how they are issued, who buys them to why they exist. Different types of municipal bonds will be discussed, including general obligation bonds, State contract bonds, moral obligation bonds and revenue bonds, with an emphasis being on the bonds issued by New Jersey's state-wide bond issuing authorities. A brief introduction to the documentation required for bonds will be provided, including security provisions.

This presentation will also explore the Internal Revenue Code provisions that permit the interest on certain municipal bonds to be exempt from federal income tax, including the Code sections and related rules and regulations that set limits on tax-exempt municipal bonds. Also to be discussed are federal securities laws and regulations regarding tax-exempt municipal bonds. Finally, the New Jersey constitutional provisions and statutes impacting the issuance of tax-exempt bonds within the State will be discussed. This presentation requires no prior experience or education on municipal bonds.
