

Where will retirement take you?

Tips for navigating volatile markets

Weathering periods of market volatility is a normal part of the investing process. Nobody likes to see their account balance drop, but there are ways to help minimize some of the anxiety related to market volatility:

- Stay calm and disciplined – Market downturns can cause anxiety and emotional panic for many. While the fear around a volatile market may make you feel the need to do something, or anything, sometimes the best thing to do is just stay calm and stick to your long-term strategy. If you are closer to retirement, market downturns can be more concerning. Being properly prepared is key. Consider talking with a State of New Jersey retirement plan counselor to help ensure your risk tolerance and asset allocation reflect your retirement goals.
- Don't try to time your investing – You may be tempted to shift your assets into more conservative investments following a market downturn and reinvest when markets start to bounce back. But think twice before you engage in this practice, which is known as “market timing.” People who leave their money invested may experience better returns than those who don't. Missing the market's best days can affect your return on investment.

Always keep in mind that building, maintaining, and spending down your retirement nest egg is more like a marathon than a sprint. If you have any questions, visit empower.com/njplans to schedule some time with your local State of New Jersey retirement plan counselor.
