APPENDIX D – FEES & SURCHARGES

FEDERAL UNIVERSAL CONNECTIVITY CHARGE

The FCC has established a Universal Service Fund (USF) that provides telecommunications services to customers in rural areas, low income customers and advanced services, such as Internet access, to schools, libraries and health care providers. AT&T and other carriers are required to contribute to the USF. Since January, 1998, AT&T has recovered this contribution, and its associated administrative costs, through a Universal Connectivity Charge (UCC). As a result of a December 13, 2002, Federal Communications Commission (FCC) decision, the FCC decided on a prospective basis that if a carrier wants to recover its Universal Service Fund (USF) assessment payments directly from its customers in a separate line item, it can only do so at a rate which does not exceed the applicable USF contribution factor paid by the carrier. As a result of this decision, the Administrative Expense Fee was created. This fee recovers a portion of AT&T's internal costs associated with the support of the Federal Communications Commission's Universal Service Fund (USF) program. . Effective April 1, 2023, the 2nd Quarter UCC factor will decrease from 32.6% to 29%. The applicable quarterly contribution factor can also be found on the FCC's Contribution Factors & Quarterly Filings Site. Effective January 1, 2023, the Administrative Expense Fee, that recovers a portion of AT&T's internal costs associated with the Federal Communications Commission's Universal Service Fund (USF) and other related programs such as E-Rate and Rural Health Care increased from 1.36% to 1.71%. We continue to make every effort to recover these costs in a fair and equitable manner.

FEDERAL ACCESS RECOVERY FEE

The Federal Access Recovery Fee (FARF) is a charge designed to recover, in part, AT&T's costs of purchasing local access service from Local Exchange Carriers (LECs), which include regulatory fees that LECs assess on AT&T.

Effective with the first invoice after July 1, 2008, AT&T will begin billing a monthly Federal Access Recovery Fee (FARF) and applicable taxes.

This charge will be based on the price of the local access service component that is integrated into the following enhanced services: Managed Internet Service (MIS), and/or Private Network Transport (PNT) service and AT&T VPN Tunneling Service (AVTS). The FARF percentage is subject to change.

OTHER TAXES, FEES & SURCHARGES

Additional taxes, fees or surcharges may apply for any services provided under this contract where imposed by local taxing authorities, where applicable.
